No Worry About Children.
Eight Centuries of Sleep.
Watch Silver, Sterling.
About Col. Roosevelt.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

PROF. JULIAN S. HUXLEY tells the British Association for Advancement of Science that birth control threatens the earth's depopulation. Men, says he, must prevent under-population as well as over-population. He worries more than is necessary.

The unwanted child is not an asset. If those that do not want children refrain from having them, so much the better. Their abstinence will improve the race.

AND THERE IS no need to worry because:

"The poor have more children, professors have few, girls from colleges have fewer, and do not want what they have."

Women that ought to have children will have them, women, for instance, like Lincoln's tall mother, the broad-hipped lady that produced Napoleon and many others, the tanner's girl, mother of William the Conqueror and of the giant archbishop, his half-brother, that rode and died beside him at the battle of Hastings, the tanner's wife that gave Pasteur to the world, the mother of peasant blood that created Renan, the other peasant woman, mother of Leonard Da Vinci, never married to his father; "Bertha with the big feet," mother of mighty Charlemagne. All such as these will have children and enjoy it. If some ladies, with minds on a permanent wave, prefer no children, Heaven bless them. They are simplifying civilization's problem.

WHEN NEW YORK CITY'S 7,000,000 people turned their clocks back one hour on Saturday night, each of them, if he got up at the usual hour next day, gained one hour's sleep.

An ingenious person calculates that the 7,000,000 hours amount to 799 years.

New Yorkers thus gained in one night almost eight centuries of sleep.

AMERICANS GENERALLY would gain a thousand centuries in progress if they could realize the importance of sleep and use wisely the energy that sleep brings.

Millions that would not let an automobile battery run down allow the battery of their own nervous energy to be always below par for lack of sleep.

DANIEL WILLARD, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and an able fighting railroad man, says conditions will improve as soon as the people stop looking for Santa Claus.

Sooner or later the unwise economizer must get the clothes and automobile that he is postponing and have his house painted.

SENATOR MORROW, to the question "when will conditions improve?" replied:

"Sixty days before anyone knows the change has come."

Intelligent men, looking for the change, will watch British conditions, the fall or rise of the pound, and the increase in the price of silver, if that price increases.

It should increase, for the world, including this rich country, needs more currency. Two piles of gold, one in Paris, one in Washington, cannot finance all creation.

The world is all one market and world conditions will move upward with our own.

CAILLAUX, ONE of the most intelligent of the very intelligent Frenchmen, advocates restoration of silver's value. He, who helped Poincare in restoring France to a gold basis, and the vast accumulation of gold in France, says now that the world's depression is caused by "a penury of monetary metals" and "silver, which has been stupidly demonetized, should be rehabilitated."

We have the silver, can produce it—hundreds of millions of ounces a year. The world needs more real money for its prosperity, and being unable to produce enough gold, it should, under wise regulations, restore silver's value.

COL. THEODORE ROOSEVELT spent the week-end at Rapidan, with President Hoover. Vice President Curtis is said to want another term. Suppose Col. Roosevelt should be chosen as Mr. Hoover's running mate, another Theodore Roosevelt nominated for vice president. What effect would that have on the election?

To what extent would it offset the magic of the Roosevelt name at the head of the Democratic ticket, if Franklin Roosevelt should be nominated? The Republican party could say:

"We offer you the son of the original Roosevelt."

Would that help?

NEW YORK STATE appoints a "big three" to spend 20 millions on unemployment relief. To avoid any dole, no money will be paid except for labor. No work, no cash.

But politicians can make wages very much like the dole and as painless.

YOUTH BITES TWO, LEAPS OUT OF WINDOW

Suspect Held for Court as Intruder After Capture In Beltzhoover Chase

Three women battled with a youthful Negro robber who had entered the bedroom of Miss Naomi Wimbauer, 25, of 112 Climax street, last night, only to see him leap from a second-story window and escape. Police later captured the intruder.

The Negro entered her room after climbing into the bathroom from a rear porch roof, Miss Wambauer told police. As he grabbed for her purse on a dresser, she screamed.

Her sister, Celia, 24, ran upstairs and seized the Negro as he was preparing to jump from the window. Both young women held onto the intruder, shouting:

"Help."

From across the street, at 111 Climax street, Mrs. Leona Frey ran to their rescue. All three struggled with the Negro to prevent his escape, but he finally freed himself and, after biting Cecila Wimbauer on the arm and her sister on the thumb, leaped out the window. He dropped the purse in the struggle. He was chased for a block by Robert Wilson, 111 Climav street, but disappeared.

Police later arrested Foster Robinson, 16, of 8 Buffington avenue, charged with being a suspicious person. He admitted in Morals Court he had entered Miss Wimbauer's room. He was held for court by Magistrate T. D. Jones.

Rites for Sanders' Wife Held in Capital

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—In response to the dying wish of Mrs. Everett Sanders, funeral services were held for her today at the Mayflower Hotel, where she lived as wife of the secretary to President Coolidge. Mrs. Sanders, who died in Paris, will be buried in Terre Haute, Ind.

Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, officiated. Mrs. Herbert Hoover was among the large group of Washington officialdom attending.

First Fan Takes Post At World Series Gate

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—The first fan to appear at Sportsman's Park for a world's series bleacher seat, which will not go on sale until 8 a. m. Thursday, arrived at 7 a. m. today.

He is Horace L. Anspaugh, 31, a hotel clerk at Horton, Kan., who said he had determined to win a $[illegible]00 bet. He brought a canvas chair, a rubber slicker, blanket, shaving outfit and stationery.

Doolittle to Seek World Speed Mark

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Maj. James Doolittle, holder of the trans-continental air speed record, today announced he will shortly make an attempt to lower the world's mark for land planes, which is now 278 miles an hour. The flier landed here after negotiating the 166 miles from Indianapolis in 46 minutes.

LESTER VAN NATTA, 21

USES HIS LOOT TO SURRENDER

A McKeesport youth who became conscience stricken and surrendered after gambling away $500 he was alleged to have stolen from a Washington, (Pa.), clothes cleaning company, was being held in Central Police Station today pending arrival of police from that city.

The youth, Lester Van Natta, 21, of Horn street, had only 13 cents left when he walked into City Detective Bureau and surrendered to Detective Sergeant James Paisley and Detective Walter Kaiser. To them he related how he had lost $500 he had stolen from the company, where he was employed as a route man, in a crap game in New York, the detectives said.

Moyle, Allen Held In Alaska by Snow

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Snow over the Yukon basin today held Don Moyle and Cecil Allen, rescued Pacific fliers, to the ground. Several days will probably elapse before favorable weather permits the two "flying salesmen" to resume their flight to Tacoma, Wash.

Edison Depressed At Slow Recovery

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Thomas A. Edison spent a good night, but, according to Dr. Hubert Howe, the aged inventor is depressed at the length of time it is taking him to recover.

Gandhi Trek at Dawn Irks Sleepy Bodyguard

LONDON, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Mahatma Gandhi returned from the textile section of Lancashire early today and rudely interrupted the sleep of several of Scotland Yard's finest.

He insisted on arising from his third-class compartment and setting out on a five-mile walk to Kingsley Hall. His bodyguards attempted to dissuade him, hoping to finish their rest, but he plodded on without a word, for it was his day of silence. They followed, grumbling.

Meanwhile, India's Hindus and Moslems were warned today they will have to settle their own commercial problems by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, who told members of the Round Table Conference minorities committee:

"I have been the scapegoat too often in my life and while I am willing to do it again if necessary, I think that in this respect you should be your own scapegoats and take the responsibility for solution of this very difficult problem."

At his suggestion the committee adjourned until Thursday and in the meantime there will be unofficial negotiations between Gandhi and the Agha Kahn, representing the two factions, beginning tonight when Mr. Gandhi's period of silence ends.

BOMB PERILS EIGHT IN HOUSE

Blast Laid to Dry Law by Ex-Saloon Owner; Windows In Nearby Homes Broken

A powder bomb "planted" on the front porch of the home of P. J. Meehan, 1132 Jancey street, early today damaged the front of the home, several adjoining dwellings and aroused the Morningside district. Meehan, a former saloon keeper, and members of his household escaped uninjured.

No motive for the bombing could be advanced by Meehan. He said:

"The only reason I can give is to blame it on the Eighteenth Amendment."

The bomb, believed to have been composed of black powder, was placed on the front porch near the doorway. The explosion tore a large hole in the porch, shattered windows and broke in the door. Windows in two nearby homes were shattered. Bits of metal from the powder container were found on the sidewalk and on adjoining front porches.

In the house at the time were Meehan, his wife, Ellen; his four sons, James, 20; Joseph, 18; Francis, 17, and Thomas, 12; his sister, Mrs. Hannah Sweeney, and a maid, Miss Mary Sweeney. All were awakened by the blast. Meehan said the smell of black powder filled the house.

Meehan retired from the saloon business with the arrival of prohibition and since that time has conducted a garage in Butler street. He said he returned home from work at 1:30 a. m. and was asleep when the explosion occurred.

The damage to the home was estimated by Meehan at $500.

RADIO-ELECTRIC SHOW TONIGHT

Radios concealed in all types of furniture and ranging in size from an alarm clock to a statue model six feet high will be exhibited at the sixth annual Radio-Electrical Show, which opens tonight at 7 o'clock in Duquesne Garden. Manufacturers have shown particular ingenuity this year in installing radio sets in out of the way and unsuspected places.

There are many things new—the pentode tube, combination standard and short wave sets, home talkie and radio sets and a bit of television.

Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of Carnegie Institute of Technology, will deliver the opening address at 9 o'clock. It will be broadcast by WCAE. Other speakers will be James A. Simpson, director of the show, and Frank R. Phillips, president of the Philadelphia Company.

Entertainers tonight will include Riggs and Moke; 20 Fingers of Sweetness; Paul Gannon, tenor; Tampa, the Magician, and the Gypsies Dance Band.

Milton J. Cross, first winner of the diction medal for announcing, will be an attraction tomorrow night.

Girl Driver Killed, Sleeps at Wheel

Aluminum Company Cuts Wages 10 Pct.

The Aluminum Company of America today announced a 10 per cent wage cut, effective October 1, in all of its plants and offices and those of its subsidiaries. The cut, officials said, had been considered for several months.

MAN BLAMES POLICE FOR INJURIES

Case Held Over as Officers Declare Victim Battered Head Against Cell Bars

Conflicting stories were told today by police and by Harry Waxter, 21, of 2466½ Charles street, as to how he suffered injuries that placed him in St. John's Hospital in a serious condition.

Waxter, suffering from a probable skull fracture, a broken nose and lacerations, said he was struck on the nose by a policeman and on the back of the head by a plainclothesman while being placed in a cell in Woods Run Station last night.

Police charge that when they attempted to arrest Waxter in connection with an attack on Elmer Huether, 40, of 2909 California avenue, at Preble avenue and Ketchum street, he put up a battle, that they had to subdue him and that after being placed in a cell he butted his head against the cell bars.

In his hospital bed today Waxter said:

"I had been drinking and was pretty disorderly, but I know I didn't try to hurt myself. Two policemen hit me and the lights went out."

Waxter was arrested by Lieut. John Joyce and Patrolman Thomas O'Bromotich. The latter testified at a preliminary hearing before Magistrate Ray Schneider in North Side Police Court today that Waxter had butted his head against the bars. Huether failed to appear as a witness. The case was held over pending the outcome of Waxter's injuries. He is charged with being a suspicious person.

23 Years in Prison; Cleared of Slaying

CHESTER, Ill., Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Jesse Lucas, who spent almost half of his 50 years of life in the Menard State Prison here for a murder he always said he did not commit, was enjoying freedom again today as the result of a deathbed confession of another man.

George R. Pond, a farmer, who lived near Decker, Ind., dying, confessed he killed Clyde Showalter, a young stock buyer, 26 years ago, and this brought release for Lucas yesterday after 23 years as prisoner No. 401.

Execute Innkeeper's Slayer at Rockview

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Sept. 28.—(AP.)—William C. Snipes, 23, formerly of Lancaster, S. C., was executed in Rockview Penitentiary today for the murder of Edward Gamils, 44, proprietor of an inn at Trevose, near Philadelphia.

The slaying occurred at the inn on February 14 as Gamils and his wife, Cecilia, prepared to close the establishment for the night. The victim was counting the day's receipts when Snipes entered, seized $500 and shot Gamils.

Illness Fails to Halt Kingsford-Smith Hop

KARACHI, India, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Haggard and worn as a result of his attempt to establish a new flight record between Australia and England, Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith, noted Australian flier, hopped off at 2:25 P. M. today for Jask, Persia, 600 miles west of here.

Kingsford-Smith said here he was not well, and had suffered several fainting spells in the air.

HARRY WAXTER, 21 . . . MEDICAL ATTENTION IN HOSPITAL

Young Mr. Waxter in St. John's Hospital today after he told how a policeman and a plainclothesman hit ham as he was being placed in a cell at Woods Run station. Police say he was arrested for an attack on another man, resisted, was subdued, beat his head on the bars.

OFFICER SLAYS GUNMAN DRIVER

An alleged hit-run driver was shot to death by a policeman early today after he had threatened to shoot the officer who had leaped on the running board of the machine in an effort to halt the driver.

The man killed was Harry Williams, 28, Negro, of 1625 Our alley. He was shot to death by Wagonman Ernest Coberly, 40, of 8 Drumm street, in Dinwiddie street near Colwell street.

Hanging on to the side of the speeding machine, Coberly called to the driver to stop. Instead, Williams is said to have shoved a revolver against the policeman and to have pulled the trigger. The revolver failed to discharge, and Coberly then drew his revolver and fired five shots.

Coberly and Wagonman Charles Zoog, of 5237 Holmes street, driving the Center avenue police patrol, had answered a call to a home in Dinwiddie street. While they were in the house they heard a crash in the street, and rushing out saw an automobile backing away from the patrol which it had struck. Both officers leaped on the running board.

Coberly is a former United States Marine and has been on the police force 13 years.

Pittsburghers Hurt In Chicago Crash

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—R. M. Dorsett, 50, of Pittsburgh, head of a national chain of beauty shops with headquarters in Chicago, and three of his employes were injured today when their automobile struck a light post.

The others hurt were Thomas Smart, 27, also of Pittsburgh; John Page, 30 of Cuba, and John Shurglot, 49, of Chicago.

AKRON FLIES TO CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—The Navy dirigible Akron paid a surprise visit to Cleveland today during its fourth test flight from Akron. It appeared over Cleveland shortly after noon.

AKRON, O., Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Slated for an all-day cruise in her first "serious test flight," the U. S. S. Akron, mightiest of all lighter than air craft, took off from here today at 10:45 a. m., starting her fourth air voyage.

After giving the ship's rudders, elevators and motors preliminary tryouts on the previous flights, Navy officials planned to give the craft a thorough test on today's flight, during which all mechanisms will be closely watched.

Boy With Gun Kills U. S. Girl in Russia

MOSCOW, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—A pistol in the hands of a little American boy today caused the death of Agnes Moore, 23, of Montour Falls, N. Y.

Miss Moore was visiting her sister, Mrs. Atherton Hastings, when a neighbor's boy obtained a pistol, and while playing with it accidentally shot the visitor.

FINAL FRAUD EVIDENCE GIVEN

Citizens Await Judge's Answer on Complaints Over Slow Recount Work

Final evidence preparatory to the first indictment recommendations of the grand jury investigating the primary election frauds and thefts was being presented to the jurors late today.

At its conclusion, the jury's presentment was expected to be taken before Judge James H. Gray in Common Pleas Court, to be followed by the court's immediate order that District Attorney Andrew T. Park prepare the indictments which, it is reliably understood, will be recommended.

Park and his assistants, Roy T. Clunk and George F. P. Langfitt, conferred early today on their plans for final evidence to be given the jury before it starts preparing its presentment.

Later, the assistants presented the result of their two-day investigation of the ballot box from the First District of Forward Township. It was in this district that the return sheet was "lost" in the County Commissioners' office for five days after the election.

The Returning Board, tabulating the official count of the September 15 election, was to hold its first night session, running until 10 p. m., in an effort to hasten its work and make its official certification of names to be placed on the November ballots.

WAIT JUDGE'S REPLY

Meanwhile, the Citizens Committee awaited reply from Judge James R. Macfarlane, in charge of the Recount Board, to a letter in which it requested him to give that organization additional clerks and auditors in order that it codld complete its task before the Returning Board makes its certifications October 15.

When the Recount Board finished its Saturday's work, it had only retabulated the ballots in three districts.

Ballots in 19 other boxes were being inspected at the same speed today. Thirty other boxes in which a recount have been asked are yet to be taken before the board, with the possibility that requests may be made for a retabulation of many more. Thirty of the 52 requests for recounts now before the board have been filed by supporters of County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern.

TO HEAR CHARGES

Judge Gray on Thursday will hear the charges of 25 citizens of

Balloon Races Off Due to Money Lack

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—The international Gordon Bennett trophy balloon race will be called off this year because of lack of sufficient financial backing, it was learned today. The contest committee of the National Aeronautic Association will meet soon to take steps to stage the races in Europe hereafter.

Hawks Again Starts Flight to Texas

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Frank Hawks, who made a forced landing in Sunbury, Pa., Saturday, took off again this morning for Dallas, Tex., by way of Indianapolis.

Airman in Glider Soars Over Downtown

BULLETIN.

Martin Schempp landed his glider in the Monongahela River at 2:35 p. m., shooting it under the Point Bridge after skimming over the surface of the Ohio. Schempp was drenched as the wash of a steamer threatened to submerge his craft. It righted itself, however, and was towed to shore.

Martin Schempp, flying a Pittsburgh-built Haller Hawk glider, was soaring over Pittsburgh late today after being cut adrift from his tow plane directly above the downtown district.

He planned to circle the Triangle in wide sweeps and land eventually on one of the rivers.

Schempp left the Greensburg airport at 1:25, towed by Pilot Ted Brooks, flying a biplane. Brooks hauled the glider, at the end of 500 feet of steel cable, to Pittsburgh in approximately half an hour, then, at an altitude of 3,000 feet, cut the towline.

At 2:30 Schempp still was circling over the downtown area, holding his altitude nicely.

FAMOUS EDITOR SEES QUICK RECOVERY

Cites Flow of Gold to U. S. And France As Factors: Traces Drain on Capital

By VISCOUNT ROTHERMERE
Famous British Publisher, Banker and Chief Proprietor of the London Daily Mail, London Evening News and other Newspapers.
(Universal Service Special Cable)

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Doctors say that the strongest men are most liable to overstrain. They presume on their fine physique till something cracks and they have to break off for a rest.

This has happened to England. Since the war she has been carrying too many burdens—other people's as well as her own.

Confident in her past record of endurance, she did not realize how much her war efforts undermined her powers.

So in the traditional British way we grumbled and paid. When other nations grumbled they did not have to pay.

CITES U. S. PAYMENTS

We pledged ourselves to meet $4,500,000,000 of our war debt to the United States in full. Till President Hoover's international debt holiday began in June every installment had been promptly fulfilled.

But we had also raised a huge internal war loan of $35,000,000,000. This was contracted at a high rate of interest and when money was abundant owing to wartime inflation of note circulation.

European nations which [illegible] the same cut their liabilities after the war by simply reducing the value of their currency. People who lent them money just had to write most of it off as a bad debt.

The British government set itself to pay its creditors in full and even to give them a bonus by raising the value of its wartime currency. By great efforts the pound sterling was brought back in 1925 to its pre-war gold value of exchange.

We shouldered every ounce of our liabilities. It now proves it overtaxed our strength. WE HAVE ACCORDINGLY EASED OUR LOAD BY ALLOWING OURSELVES TO BE PUSHED OFF THE GOLD STANDARD TO WHICH WE RETURNED SIX YEARS AGO.

To maintain it would soon have become impossible in any case. There was not enough gold available. The United States has one-half the world's supply and France has another quarter.

DEFAULT ON LOANS

Bad as this situation was it might have lasted some time longer if the crisis had not been precipitated by developments abroad. What happened was this: London is the great international banking center. Our banks have huge deposits of American, French and other foreign moneys. On these they were paying a low rate of interest and in the ordinary way of business loaning them at a higher rate to Germany, among other countries, for short terms.

The Germans, however, locked up this borrowed capital in the building of factories, power stations and docks. The consequence was that when bad trade brought a sudden crisis in Germany last June she was not able to repay the short-term money she had borrowed from London.

This started an international scare. Foreigners who still had money on deposit in London began to draw it out. Being on the gold standard we soon found our stock of gold running low. For a time, the Bank of England supplemented it by getting gold credits from the big banks of America and France. But the steady drain went on and finally, on September 20, we had to stop it by renouncing our liability to pay in gold.

FACING FACTS

Every other country in Europe except the small war neutral states of Switzerland, Holland, Norway, Sweden and Denmark, had already been forced to abandon the pre-war gold standard. The big mistake Britain made was in believing she was strong enough to pay for the war and still meet all her other debts in full.

There are few men in the world who have studied these economic questions more closely than myself. For over 10 years I have been warning my fellow-countrymen of the dangers of Britain's economic position.

I SAY DELIBERATELY NOW THAT IT IS A GOOD THING THEY HAVE COME TO A HEAD AT LAST. WE ARE FACING THE FACTS.

Hoover Fights Jack Frost On Way From Camp

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Jack Frost and President Hoover had an informal meeting today on a country road.

Before most Americans more than suspect that winter is around the corner it had made heavy clothing comfortable at the mountain-secluded Rapidan presidential lodge. Today the sun had barely peeped above the mountain tops and had done nothing to dispel the penetrating chill when the chief executive's cavalcade wound down the mountain road toward the White House.

Mr. Hoover reached his desk at his usual working hour with fresh knowledge of problems which confront his administration. Yesterday Hanford MacNider, American minister to Canada, joined the presidential guests. He was flown from Bolling Field to the camp in an Army airplane.

Both MacNider and Col. Theodore Roosevelt, governor of Porto Rico, were among those who fought with President Hoover at the American Legion convention last week against further cash demands by World War veterans.

Speculation that veterans' legislation was discussed over the week-end was given further credence by the presence of Gov. Brucker, of Michigan, who also backed the President's stand before the Legion convention.

M'DONALD MAY STEP ASIDE

LONDON, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Prime Minister MacDonald was represented by close friends today as having come to the decision that he would step aside in the event that a general election became necessary this fall.

He intends to carry on as head of the national government, it was said, and if the non-partisan project does not draw support from all parties he will refuse to lend his leadership to any one section or party in an appeal to the people.

He was said to have demanded a free hand in striving for national unity to tide Great Britain through her financial difficulties or a "dictators' mandate" for maintaining the national government.

Gloomy Dean Turns Optimist in England

LONDON, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Dean William R. Inge, some times called Great Britain's "gloomy dean," has expressed himself optimistically regarding the recent turn of events in the country in "The Church of England Newspaper." He said:

"If we look at the matter not from the point of view of justice to individuals and classes but from that of the welfare of the nation as a whole, we shall judge the social revolution through which we are passing less unfavorably."

British Diplomats Get Salary Reduction

LONDON, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—British ambassadors and ministers abroad are to take a 10 per cent salary cut in line with the government's retrenchment policy, the House of Commons was informed today.

Padlocks Asked For Three Places

Temporary injunctions were granted by Judge Nelson McVicar in Federal Court today, against three places in Western Pennsylvania. The places and alleged proprietors were: Confectionery, 1403 Parade Street, Erie, L. G. Fleet; alleged speakeasy, R. D. 1, Albion, Erie County, Ronald A. Tarr; Fairman House, Conneaut, Charles Baecker.

Bankruptcy Asked For Shoe Concern

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in Federal Court today against Herman Saltzman, trading as the Factory Outlet Stores, in Homestead, Turtle Creek and Tarentum. The petitioners' claims totaled $554.17.

SERVE WRITS ON REGISTRARS

Sixteen warrants charging the Registration Commission with conspiracy in striking names of "phantom voters" from the September 15 voting lists were served today on Commissioners Sara Braun and Thomas Joyce. Each was released under $500 bail.

John K. Morrow, chairman of the Commission, and E. Lowry Humes, who have visited their office seldom since election day, could not be found for service. Constable Frank Goddard, of Alderman A. W. Hadley's office, reported at noon.

3 MORE NATIONS DROP GOLD

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS
International News Service.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Following the lead of Great Britain, Norway, Sweden and Egypt were off the gold standard today as new problems arising from changing monetary values caused serious concern to the governments of Denmark, Finland, Greece and the Irish Free State.

The collapse of the gold standard in the Scandinavian countries was partially attributed to the depreciation of the British pound, due to the close trade and financial relations between Norway, Sweden and England, and also to the recent failure of Sweden to obtain new sustaining credits in the United States and France.

The governments of both Norway and Sweden prohibited the exporting of gold, and in Sweden the national bank raised its discount rate from 6 to 8 per cent.

STUDENTS CLUB, BEAT CHINESE MINISTER

Statesman Attacked and Seriously Injured by Throng: Clothing Torn

NANKING, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Foreign Minister C. T. Wang was attacked and seriously injured today by a mob of students who blamed him for failing to induce the League of Nations to intervene in the Manchurian controversy between China and Japan.

But for the intervention of a group of servants, Dr. Wang probably would not have escaped alive. The mob, using clubs and inkpots, rained blows on his head, smashed windows and furniture and reduced Wang's office to wreckage.

The foreign minister's clothing was torn to shreds. His servants, breaking into the office through a rear window, finally carried him away. Examination disclosed he probably would live.

Dr. Wang was found to have three serious wounds in the chest and lesser ones on the arms and legs. President Chiang Kai-Shek sent a detachment of his personal bodyguard to Dr. Wang's home to protect it against attacks.

GENEVA, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Early solution of the Sino-Japanese crisis in Manchuria was predicted here today following reports M. Yoshisawa, Japanese delegate, had been instructed by his government to inform the League of Nations council that Japan would comply with Geneva's request for immediate withdrawal of Japanese troops.

It was understood Japanese forces would be withdrawn from the entire Manchurian railway zone, including the points which Japan still considers as "menaced" by the Chinese. Japanese nationals in the district are expected to be evacuated by the troops.

2 'HIGHER-UPS' FACE ARREST

Two "big shots," one of them reported to be a Hill politician, are slated for arrest on charges of violating the election laws, it was learned today, as a result of the campaign against terrorism at the polls being waged by the Registration Board.

Informations against the two are understood to have been made by citizens before Alderman Albert J. Henning, of 2022 Brownsville road, Carrick. He declined to disclose their names, pending their arrest. The complainants testified before the board in its investigation of law violations.

Alderman Henning was given 12 more warrants today sworn out by the Registration Board, making a total of 60 made thus far charging perjury or violation of the election laws.

YACHT WIDOW'S STORY UPHELD

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Mrs. Benjamin P. Collings' oft-repeated story of her husband's murder by two men, who boarded their cruiser on Long Island Sound, was further substantiated today by the finding of two pairs of trousers and a bathing suit in the waters of Cove Neck.

Deputy Sheriff Kehlendeck, acting on orders of District Attorney Alexander G. Blue, found the articles yesterday as he was grappling in the Sound. The garments were covered with seaweed and sand, indicating they had been in the water for some weeks. Collings, a Stamford, Conn., engineer, was drowned on September 9.

Mrs. Collings had told Suffolk officials that two men, one about 40, the other about 18, threw her husband into the Sound, and took her away in a small boat in which they changed clothes, throwing their discarded garments into the Sound.

INDICTMENTS IN QUIZ DUE

the Twelfth Ward that polling places there were kept open two hours after the legal closing hour. He is to rule on a petition that all votes cast in the alderman fight in that district be declared invalid.

Michael DeRosa, Jr., son of the Republican ward chairman, is leading William J. Means, incumbent, in the unofficial returns in the alderman fight by less than 100 votes.

The Returning Board, in the meantime, was checking on six districts of the ward where evidence of irregularities has already been discovered.

A discrepancy between the tally sheet and the return sheet in the aldermanic fight in the Eighth District was discovered by the return board today. The board will recanvass the ballot. The tally sheet showed 324 for Means and the return sheet gave him 299. DeRosa received 226 on both tally sheet and return sheet. If the tally sheet is found to be correct, it will mean a gain of 25 votes for Means.

Returning Board Takes Up 34 More Districts

Thirty-four additional districts were handled by the returning board today, bringing the total number tabulated up to 343. The totals of these districts compared with unofficial totals from the same districts in the commissionership fight showed:

Three hundred and fory-three districts—

Official—

Mansfield	McGovern	Coyne	Armstrong

Unofficial—

Mansfield	McGovern	Coyne	Armstrong

There was a wide variance between the official returns and the unofficial returns from the Twelfth Ward, Fourteenth District.

	Mansfield	McGovern	Coyne	Armstrong
Official—
	365	309	314	288
Unofficial—
	261	214	167	43

The board was ordered to recanvass the vote in the First Ward, Second District of Etna. Both Coyne and CMcGovern were short 100 votes on the return sheet as compared with the tally sheet. The district election board, called in, could not explain the discrepancies. The tally sheet showed CMcGovern 229 against 129 on the return sheet, and Coyne, 208 against 108 on the return sheet. Armstrong benefited to the extent of one vote by the return sheet, which showed he had 232 against the 231 on the tally sheet.

DUNHAM, FORD FIDDLER, DIES

LEWISTON, Me., Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Alanson Mellen (Mellie) Dunham, 78, Maine's old-time fiddler champion, who achieved national prominence when he was invited to play for Henry Ford at Detroit, died yesterday at a local hospital after he failed to rally from an operation. He had been ill but two weeks.

Mellie attracted Ford's attention when he won the state "title" at a local contest. His championship as a fiddler was disputed by "Uncle John" Wilder, former President Calvin Coolidge's uncle.

Mellie had been a farmer and snowshoe maker as well as fiddler before he achieved prominence. He manufactured the snowshoes Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary carried with him on his dash to the North Pole.

Skyscraper Studios For WCAU at Phila.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Skyscraper studios for radio station WCAU are to be built atop the 21-story Franklin Trust Company Building, it was announced today. Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, will help supervise the construction of the new studios, which will include an experimental laboratory especially designed for him.

FRENCH CHIEFS PAY VISIT TO HINDENBURG

Leaders Confer on Measures For Restoring Europe To Basis of Confidence

BULLETIN.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Creation of a Franco-German economic commission to devise means of co-operation between France and Germany was announced tonight in a communique issued by Premier Laval and Foreign Minister Aristide Briand, of France, after a conference with Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Julius Curtius, of Germany.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Premier Laval, of France, and his foreign minister, Aristide Briand, today shook hands with President Von Hindenburg and went into conference with German statesmen on measures of co-operation to restore the confidence of Europe.

PURELY FORMAL

The conversation between President von Hindenburg and his guests was purely formal. After the customary exchange of greetings he expressed the hope that they would solve the economic problems involved by united efforts and they replied in a similar vein.

Their parley with Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius was understood to revolve around the question as to whether Franco-German economic co-operation was possible on a large scale by the financing of Germany's surplus labor with France's surplus capital.

One suggestion advanced was to award bridge building and other structural contracts in French colonies to German concerns. Another suggestion was to provide French credits for specific German concerns strictly on a business basis. The industries mentioned chiefly were coal, iron, electrical and chemical.

DEVOID OF POMP

The French statesmen's visit to the President was devoid of military pomp or display. Their black limousine swiftly entered the gate of the executive mansion and drew up to the portico where two steel-helmeted youths in the Reichswehr uniform snapped to attention.

DRYS TO FIGHT 'ANTI' TREND

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Genuinely alarmed over the powerful national influences that have been thrown against prohibition in recent weeks, the Federation of Allied Dry Organizations announced today a program of retaliatory tactics against those organizations.

Singled out for special attention by the drys are the American Legion, the American Federation of Labor, the American Bar Association and the American Medical Association, all of which in convention this year have denounced the Eighteenth Amendment and demanded, at least, modification of the Volstead act.

The dry strategy is to "bore from within" in each of these numerically and politically powerful national associations, with the ultimate objective of so mobilizing the dry members that the declarations of opposition to existing dry laws may be repudiated at some future date.

'Baby Star' to Wed Director Ruggles

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Wesley Ruggles, motion picture director, and Arline Judge, one of the 1931 Wampas "Baby Star" selections, have announced their engagement. Miss Judge appeared recently in a picture directed by Ruggles. They said the date for the wedding had not been set.

Skipper Sentenced For Insurance Plot

Buy to Aid in Job Crisis, Gifford Urges Public

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—The public, by failure to spend its money, is blamed by Walter S. Gifford for much of the unemployment distress.

Consumer buying, the man entrusted by President Hoover with caring for the suffering of the jobless believes, must precede solution of the problem. He said in a radio address last night:

"If the public buys neither work nor goods, it is the public that is indirectly discharging men."

He enumerated a four-point program for coping with unemployment distress. It concluded:

1—Appointment of a state-wide committee of leading citizens by the Governor.

2—Organization of an emergency committee in needy communities.

3—Determination by this committee of the probable unemployment load and the development of ways to meet it by providing employment or relief.

4—Reports to the state committees on plans of the local groups.

SINGER'S VOICE PAVED WAY TO LOVE

(Herewith is the first chapter of Aimee Semple McPherson's own story of her sensational romance and airplane marriage with David L. Hutton, the baritone hero of her opera "The Iron Furnace.")

By AIMEE SEMPLE M'PHERSON
High Priestess of Angelus Temple, Los Angeles, Cal.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 28.—I am a bride and I am so happy.

At last I have found my ideal.

I have always said that the man I married must love music and have the same interests as I have in God's work.

My husband, David L. Hutton, has all those things and more. He has understanding, sympathetic human understanding, and love for all that is good.

He has been a concert singer, voice instructor and choir singer, and has made a name for himself in Southern California.

MET SIX YEARS AGO

I first met him casually about six years ago when our religious work brought us together. He was only a youngster then, and I never gave him a second thought.

I guess it was his singing that first attracted me to him.

I came to admire him for his talents as a singer and composer and the wonderful use to which he was putting them; singing, composing and speaking in the Master's service in scores of campaigns with various evangelists and also appearing in concerts in which he was enthusiastically acclaimed throughout the country.

Several months ago I wrote a sacred oratorio titled "The Iron Furnace." In Dave I saw the ideal person for director of the chorus of the opera and also well suited for one of the leading roles, that of Pharoah. And so I engaged him in June to help me produce it.

ATTACHMENT GROWS

In rehearsal and in actual presentation of the oratorio, Dave's conquering baritone voice rose above the heart-stirring strains of the musical showing of the trials and tribulations of the tribes of Israel, so much so that he and I became more closely associated with each other.

In "The Iron Furnace," Dave sat, somewhat Egyptianized, with long beard, on a gilded throne as Pharoah, close to the place I occupied as director general and soloist of the opera. I watched him and listened to him sing and became enchanted.

It was shortly after the opera rehearsals began that Dave proposed marriage to me.

Then one day late in June when we were alone at the temple he looked at me with his big blue eyes and said:

"Aimee, I love you."

How I remember just how he said it as he took my hands and looked into my eyes. I admit I was a bit flustered. I could feel my cheeks coloring. I didn't know exactly what to say.

Before I really knew it, he was proposing—asking me to marry him. Marriage! It was not a new experience to me. I had been married twice previously. My first husband died; my second I divorced. But I had been alone without a mate for 16 years.

DELAYS HER ANSWER

He didn't get down on his knees. He just waited for my answer. I was glad that he wanted me. What woman is not pleased when man makes love to her and proposes?

But I didn't say "Yes" to Dave right away. I told him I wanted time to think it over.

Men had proposed to me before in the last few years, but all of them I turned down. I wasn't interested in them. I wasn't in love. But with Dave things seemed different.

I am 38. He is eight years my junior. I thought of that. But he said age made no difference. He wanted me to be his wife.

I thought, too, of my daughter, Roberta, 20, who was married to William Brady Smythe while on a world's cruise with me this spring, and of my son, Rolf, 18, who last July took as his bride pretty Lorna Dee Smith, an Angelus Temple graduate. And I thought of my mother, who, alone also, had sought companionship in a mate this summer.

WOMAN IN WILL FIGHT LONGS FOR YOUTH

Spinster of 74, Nearest Kin Of Wendels, Pushes Claim To $50,000,000 Fortune

BULLETIN.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—A suit to break the will of the late Ella Wendel, who left most of the Wendel millions to charity, was filed in United States District Court today by Arthur Garfield Hays and Samuel Untermyer on behalf of Rosa Dew Stansbury, 74, of Vicksburg, Miss., a relative in the fifth degree.

International News Service.

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 28.—A 74 year-old spinster, possible heiress to $50,000,000, longed wistfully for her lost youth here today.

She is Miss Rosa Dew Stansbury, of Vicksburg, Miss., reported to be the nearest surviving kin to the late Miss Ella Von E. Wendel, of New York, who died last March leaving an estate estimated to be in excess of $50,000,000, principally to charity.

A court fight to establish her claim to the $50,000,000 Wendel estate, as revealed by Miss Stansbury through her attorney, Winfield P. Jones, of Atlanta, is under way in New York.

NEAREST KIN

Miss Stansbury, who, according to genealogical records, is the nearest surviving kin to the late Miss Wendel, told reporters today:

"I wish I were a little younger. I am going to try to obtain my rights. Even though I may be too old to get as much pleasure from the money as I could were I younger, I can still do a great amount of good with it.

"I'm not really old, anyway. I may be old in years, but I'm young in spirit. I like young people and always have."

Miss Stansbury was dressed in a smart gray dress and gray hat. She weighs less than 100 pounds and is scarcely 5 feet tall.

NOTED ATTORNEYS AID

Referring to a paper she is said to have signed under which she was to receive an advance payment of $1,000 and a promise of $24,000 on completion of probate of the will, she said:

"I certainly understood my attorney was to approve the agreement before it became effective."

Miss Stansbury, the daughter of Gen. Tobias E. Stansbury, at present is the traveling companion of Mrs. Alice Calder, of New Orleans, and is visiting here.

Clarence Darrow, Samuel Untermeyer and Arthur Garfield Hayes, three noted attorneys, are associated with Jones in prosecuting Miss Stansbury's claims.

AIRPORT FORCE SEEKS PAY

Three hundred laborers recently laid off at the County Airport today appealed to County Commissioner C. C. McGovern for their pay which they said they had been unable to collect "because there was no money."

McGovern said he had verified that the appropriation of $400,000 made by the County Commissioners over his protest two months ago to be expended by the maintenance bureau of the County Road Department, had been exhausted. He told the men to come back tomorrow when he would try to have a meeting of the Commissioners called to appropriate sufficient money to pay them.

Actress' Ex-Husband, 2 Die as Plane Falls

FONDA, N. Y., Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Dr. R. Barton Read, 33, of New York, divorced husband of Hope Williams, actress, and two companions, were killed when the airplane Dr. Read was piloting crashed into a field six miles from here. Officials investigating the accident today were told the plane had been zigzagging before it fell.

Dr. Samuel S. Ellis, 29, of Buffalo, and his brother, Joseph William Ellis, Jr., 24, were the other victims.

Islam Grotto Plans Cornerstone Laying

The cornerstone of Islam Grotto's new temple being erected at 107 East Montgomery avenue, North Side, will be laid this evening at 6:30 o'clock with an address by John S. Herron, president of City Council and prophet of the Grotto. Dr. D. S. Ashcom will preside, with Congressman Edmund F. Erk and Walter F. Weberg, monarch of Islam Grotto taking part. A parade of Grotto members and candidates at 8 and a ceremonial at 9 complete the program. The ceremonial will be held in Moose Temple.

Blackmers, Famous Stage Pair, Keep Matrimony And Careers Apart

When the curtain rises tonight upon the world premiere of "The Social Register" in the Nixon Theater, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Blackmer will be playing opposite each other—but not as Mr. and Mrs. Blackmer. Lenore Ulric, star of "Lulu Belle" and "Pagan Lady," will be the Lenore of old. But when that curtain descends upon the final act—well, that's another story.

Both are firm in the belief that married life should not interfere with the professional life of the actor. Each will continue with the work of the stage. Their views were expressed while they went through rehearsal yesterday.

Blackmer said:

"Married life never enters into the equation of a stage production. When the curtain goes up it is as if one had never even heard of the one who is playing opposite him. The fact that Lenore and I are married never enters into our stage life at all."

Miss Ulric addd:

"One of the best ways for married couples to stay married is for each to continue his profession, as long as it does not interfere with the happiness of the other."

Blackmer said he had abandoned the screen "to be with Lenore." For the possible exception of a few short pictures, he will not return to the cinema, at least not for any long-time contracts. He said:

"Although I enjoyed movie work very much, it cannot be compared with the legitimate stage. It is much better to play for an audience which will respond than to play for a camera. It's like batting a ball against a blanket; there is no bounce back.

"I believe that those who go into moving picture work with a background of stage training make the best actors. One of the best actresses I have ever played opposite is Marion Davies."

They will continue with stage work for the next several years, they said.

Poison Victim

Americanized Bible Nears Completion at Chicago

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—An entirely Americanized Bible is soon to make its appearance.

The New Testament version will be by Dr. Edgar J. Goodspeed, while the Old Testament will be presented by Dr. J. M. Powis Smith. Both are members of the faculty of the University of Chicago. Dr. Goodspeed said:

"We feel our work will supply a great public need, for while King James' version is a very lovely one, and there will always be those who cling to this old translation, the majority of the people do not understand the meaning of the Bible in its old terminology."

Dr. Goodspeed said that from the discovery of old papyrus documents in Egypt left by the Grecian colonists of many centuries ago, scientists had solved the mystery of the wording of the Greek translation of the New Testament. He declared:

"It has been noted by all the students in this field that the Greek of the New Testament was not classic in form, and did not, in fact, conform with that of any other known documents. However, with these comparatively recent discoveries of papyri contemporary with this Greek translation, the mystery has been solved. For it has been found that the New Testament of centuries ago was written in the colloquial Greek of that day."

KANE RETURNS FOR MURDER HEARING

Professor to Face Charges Of Drowning Wife on Day His Classes Resume

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

HAMPTON, Va., Sept. 28.—Prof. Elisha Kent Kane, charged with drowning his wife, was back here today after a flying automobile trip to Knoxville, Tenn., where he is head of the romance language department at the University of Tennessee.

When the new term starts at the university next Wednesday his classes will be without the professor as on that day he is to be formally arraigned on a charge of murder.

The professor said that his trip "was extremely satisfactory." His friends among the faculty pledged their support of him and reaffirmed their belief in his innocence. It was expected a number of them will be called by him as defense character witnesses at his trial in the event he is indicted.

E. Kent Kane, of Bradford, Pa., the professor's cousin and one of his defense attorneys, accompanied the defendant on his trip.

With the return of the principal interest in the case was revived today. Hundreds of curious visited the lonely back bay lighthouse where the wife of the professor was drowned in shallow water.

'Other Woman' to Talk For Kane, Sister Says

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Bessie Harris Dahl, charming "sea Cinderella" and focal figure in the Kane death mystery of Hampton, Va., is registered under an assumed name at a hotel within 20 miles of this city. If Prof. Elisha Kane, to whom she wrote letters on which the Virginia authorities hope to predicate a motive for Mrs. Kane's death, is indicted, she will come forward and testify.

Concerning the name of the hotel, the family of the former gay Leviathan stewardess maintained the deepest silence, thereby aggravating the quandary of the trained detectives who have now combed six states and the District of Columbia in a vain effort to locate the pretty, letter-writing divorcee.

NURSE FOUND SUICIDE

The death of Miss Helen W. Sharpnack, 21, a student nurse at Homeopathic Hospital, whose body was found in a woods in Marion Township, Beaver County, after a search of almost two months, will be listed as a probable suicide, Coroner Harry C. McCarter said today.

When the young woman left the Y. W. C. A. camp on the Connoquenessing Creek, near Zelienople, August 5, she said she was going for a walk in the woods.

Two men, walking through the woods with their dog, discovered the body. Near the body police reported finding her purse, containing three empty vials which had contained poison. The body was removed to an undertaking establishment in Zelienople and later claimed by the parents.

Weather Conditions.

The disturbance that was centered over Eastern Ontario Saturday morning moved eastward very slowly and another disturbance moved north along the Atlantic coast. These disturbances caused cloudy and rainy weather over this section during yesterday. High pressure now occupies the interior of the country, with its crest over Northern Illinois, while a low is moving northward off the Middle Atlantic coast, and another over the Far West, with its center over Alberta. This distribution of pressure is producing clear skies over much the greater portion of the country. Temperature changes were towards cooler east of the Mississippi and warmer over the West. There are no low temperatures on the map this morning and no high temperatures reported yesterday afternoon.

G.O.P. FACES '32 LOSSES OVER DRY ISSUE

Must Pledge Law Change or Drop 144 Electoral Votes In East, Party Chiefs Say

By LOUIS SEIBOLD

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The four most relentless drivers of the Republican water wagon—President Hoover, Bishop Cannon, National Chairman Fess and Dr. Clarence True Wilson—are due for a disagreeable drenching. The dry engine is sinking.

Republican leaders in the eastern section of the country privately predict that any attempt to limit party convention expression to a blanket endorsement of law enforcement will fail. Refusal to pledge a satisfactory change in the prohibition laws will inevitably cost the Republican party the electoral votes of every eastern state between Virginia and Maine according to these men.

VOTE LOSS SEEN

The opinion prevails among them that regardless of other causes, indorsement of prohibition as is will forfeit the 144 electoral votes of Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and not unlikely Vermont. Even Maine, it is declared, is getting tired of prohibition.

Convinced of the growing resentment among Republicans against the further flouting of public sentiment, most of the leaders of these and other sectional divisions are frankly skeptical of their ability to send delegates to the nominating convention who will consent to march under the dry standard any longer.

The reasons they advance are supported by recent examples cited by them of the growing unpopularity of the Hoover dry policy. Opposition to it has been consistently reflected in state and local elections throughout the East during the last year.

FIGHT ON DRY DELEGATES

The logical interpretation read in connection with the increase of wet sentiment among Republicans on the Atlantic seaboard as shown by results—generally disastrous to Republican interests—is that Republican voters in most of the eastern states will oppose the selection of dry delegates to the nominating convention.

New York provides an illuminating example of Republican fallacy in stubbornly insisting upon the perpetuation of the present prohibition system. All the Democratic officials in state, city and outside centers, as well as the 23 members of that party in Congress, are irrevocably anti-dry.

Of the 20 Republican members 10 are opposed to prohibition, not more than six actually favor the dry cause and the other four are uncertain with a pronounced tendency to fall on the anti-dry side.

Republican anti-drys in Congress are Bacon, La Guardia, Fish, Ruth and Harcourt Pratt, Millard, Hancock, Culkin, Andrews and Whitley. Representatives clinging to the dry cause are Parker, Davenport, Stalker, Taber, Crowther and Cook.

OTHERS MAY YIELD

Those who not unlikely will surrender to the anti-dry sentiment in their districts are Snell, Clarke, Reed and Sanders. Snell is a candidate for Speaker of the House. He was catalogued a dry until last year when he indorsed the middle of the road position of Mr. Tuttle, Republican candidate for governor.

Information furnished by well-informed state leaders is that sentiment in the rural districts is rapidly crystalizing in favor of a change in the prohibition policy. These leaders are convinced the Republican party will not stand a ghost of a chance of carrying the state unless the national party changes its attitude on prohibition.

ULTIMATUM TO LEADERS

Former Senator Wadsworth, Charles E. Hilles, Ogden Mills, State Chairman Macy, Charles E. Tuttle, National Committeeman Ruth Pratt, Fred Bradley, of Buffalo, and other important men in the party have bluntly informed the national leaders that three-fourths of the 90 delegates from New York to the next nominating convention will oppose the enforcement of prohibition or further evasion of the issue.

That which is true of New York also applies to New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and New Hampshire, without taking into consideration the unmistakable change in sentiment on prohibition in most of the mid-western states.

As eastern leaders view the matter, Mr. Hoover, Bishop Cannon, Chairman Fess and Dr. Wilson will find it most difficult if not impossible to line up a majority of the 1,000 delegates in the next nominating convention for anything but a more liberal, if not reasonably anti-dry plank in their party platform.

Elissa Landi Sailing To See Ill Mother

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 28—(AP)—Because of the serious illness of her mother in England, Elissa Landi, motion picture actress, has left here to sail on the Ile de France from New York next Friday.

If her mother has recovered Miss Landi plans to bring her and her step-father to America and Hollywood when she returns. They are Count and Countess Zenardi Landi, of Hungarian birth. Miss Landi, who was born in Venice, Italy, is an English subject and the wife of John Cecil Lawrence, young barrister.

WILLIAM BRANT RITES TUESDAY

Funeral services for William H. Brant, pioneer merchant in West View, who died Saturday in Suburban General Hospital, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the home, Bellevue road, West View. Burial will be in Mt. Royal Cemetery.

Mr. Brant

Mr. Brant was born in McCandless Township, and spent his boyhood on a farm. He moved to Perrysville after his marriage in 1892 and went into the grocery and general merchandise business with Charles J. Hieber, trading under the name of Hieber & Brant. He sold his interest in the firm to Hieber in 1903 and went to West View, where he established his own business. Later he went into the automobile and garage business and at the time of his death operated two garages in West View.

Mr. Brant was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, West View. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Hannah Hieber Brant; six sons, Lloyd W., Wade C., Robert H., Wilson E., Ernest F., and William H. Brant, Jr.; two sisters, Mrs. Charles Groetzinger, of Leetsdale, and Mrs. Margaret Kummer, of Perrysville, and a brother, Edward A. Brant, of Sewickley.

ADMITS SEWER MURDER OF WIFE

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—(AP)—A confession that he slew his wife because she irritated him by reminders of her superior education, and that he placed her body, wrapped in a blanket, in a manhole, was made yesterday, police said, by John Chorak. Chorak was arrested Saturday at his former home town of Beaver Dam, Wis., and was brought back to Chicago for questioning.

Mrs. Chorak's body was found last July 4 in the manhole of a sewer on the South Side. The husband was quoted:

"She used to be a school teacher. I never had much learning. She was all the time rubbing it in—how much smarter she was. It got on my nerves. Then, to cap everything, she had me arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct.

"The night before I was due in court she came into my bedroom with a knife. I thought she was going to kill me so I struck her. I knocked her out. I believed she was dead so I wrapped her in a blanket and dropped her down that manhole."

LINDY MAY FLY TO PEIPING

PEIPING, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Indications that Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh will fly to Peiping within a few days was seen today in a request for a survey of airplane landing facilities here.

Perry Hutton, a native of Wichita, Kan., and personal pilot to Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, flew over the lake at the summer palace, and advised Col. Lindbergh there was a 4,000-foot straightaway available here for landing.

The Lindberghs will arrive in Peiping about October 4.

NANKING, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh had planned to fly to Hankow today to survey the Han River flood area, but was forced to postpone the trip until tomorrow because of heavy rains.

Brick Yard Worker Injured by Engine

Struck by a shifting engine of the Pennsylvania Railroad while at work in the brick yards of the Harbison-Walker Company, Moses Sweeney, 51, of Hays, was cut and bruised. He was removed to South Side Hospital where his condition was reported as fair.

BEER PLEA SEEN AT N. J. PARLEY

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Republican members of Congress from New Jersey, including Senators Morrow and Kean, were to hold a conference in Newark today at which it was predicted a resolution calling upon President Hoover to legalize 4 per cent beer would be adopted.

The call for the meeting was issued by Representative Isaac Bacharach here. He would not disclose the purpose of the gathering. Bacharach is a ranking member of the Ways and Means Committee.

Friends of Bacharach asserted it was likely a beer legalization bill would be drafted at the conference to be submitted to Congress when it convenes. At the time of the Moose convention here last month Bacharach, Vice President Curtis and Senator Davis of Pennsylvania discussed the 4 per cent beer subject as a possible campaign issue.

WIFE'S SUITOR TORTURED

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—The terrorism of revenge broke up the romance of a ship's mate and a comely runaway wife, and police today expressed fear the woman had been "taken for a ride" as her companion was beaten and burned on his back.

The story of torture and kidnaping was told police by Mario Barrone, who admitted he had planned to elope with pretty Mrs. Margaret Merole. She is the mother of two young children.

Barrone asserted that James Merole, with three accomplices, invaded his apartment where Merole's wife was at the time. Both were taken to an automobile from which Mrs. Merole was transferred later to another car while Barrone was driven to an empty house near the Meroles' Brooklyn home.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

I HAVE, for the last two weeks, been carrying a letter around with me. It comes from Richmond, Va., and the man's name and address are signed to it. I, however, will use neither the full name nor the address. It would hardly be fair.

Both the letter and my answer are printed because I feel that the subject is interesting. You, too, may feel the same way. Here, then, is the letter:

"Dear Mr. Hellinger:

"I have been reading your columns for some time past. I feel that you understand human nature to a certain degree, and I therefore take the liberty of writing you this letter. I ask nothing more than advice—and if you cannot give me that, just tear this letter up and forget it completely.

"My problem is simple, and you have doubtless heard it in various forms time and time again. I am 20 years of age and a member of the so-called better class of Richmond. My family—father, mother and elder brother—want me to become a lawyer. And I want to become an actor.

"Thus I sit in school all day and spend all of my Saturdays in my father's law office. I hate the work and I hate the life.

"I know that I can act. Don't ask me how I know or why I know. I just feel that certain spark. My experience in the field of the theater has necessarily been limited. But I know that, once given a chance, I could make good with a vengeance.

"I have no intention of boring you with all of my lonely thoughts. Sufficient for me to relate that I walked into my father's room the other day and told him what was in my mind. Instead of helping me, he laughed at me. He closed the argument by telling me that I was a fool. That's all I could get from him.

"I don't know how old you are, Mr. Hellinger, but I take the liberty of writing you as man to man. I have two courses open to me; I can either quit my home and come on to Broadway, or I can remain here and become something that I have no desire to become.

"Which, in your opinion, is the better life? I feel certain that you will answer me. And please, if you will, as soon as possible.

"Cordially and admiringly,

"NORMAN D."

Your question, Norman, is not a new one. It has been asked, I imagine, since Broadway was a meadow.

I, frankly, as not wise enough to offer a personal opinion on a case like yours. But, for purposes of this column, I asked several people their idea of your letter. You may, perhaps, find your answer from them . . .

A taxi driver. Perhaps 35. I have driven up from all the way downtown. It is raining fiercely. As I pay him off, I ask him a question.

"If you were a kid in a small town," I asked him, "would you give up your family in order to become an actor?"

"You ain't a nut, are you?" was his questioning response.

I assured him that, as far as I was aware, I was not. And I then explained the situation to him more fully.

"Oh," he said, "I see. Well, I'll tell you. I don't know nothin' about them things—but here's the way I dope it.

"I'm only a cab driver, but I wouldn't change places with nobody in the whole world. I got two kids and a sweet mommer for a wife. When I get home my supper is ready. When I go out my breakfast is ready.

"If I was the father of that kid in the small town, I'd kill him before I'd let him loose on Broadway. I'm drivin' this cab for a long time, mister, and I've drove a lot of Broadway guys and dames around.

"And, mister, if you could have seen the things that I've seen and the things that I've heard, you'd say wot I say. Let de kid stay where he is, mister. Let de kid stay where he is." . . .

A chorus girl. In a barroom. 3 a. m. She's about 23. Been a Broadway gal for a long time. She is drunk. Not brutally so, perhaps, but just about as much as usual.

She is seated on the bar. Her legs are dangling. Her eyes are shining brightly—too brightly. Her cheeks are flushed.

"Mildred," I said, "grab a load of this. Here's a letter from a kid in the south. He wants to be an actor and his papa wants him to be a lawyer. If you were he, what would you do?"

The girl laughed.

"I'd come on to Broadway," she replied. "The kid'll die down there and he'll never know what it's all about. Tell 'im to come on up here. We need new blood on the big alley anyhow.

"Tell the kid to come along. I'll take him in tow. I'll teach him things he never dreamed about. This is the only game. I wouldn't change places with Mrs. Vincent Astor."

I tried again.

"Just a minute, Mildred," I insisted. "That's only the way you feel right now. When those wrinkles start to come—when the saps won't feed you liquor any more—how will you feel then?"

The girl laughed again. Very loudly this time.

"Hey, gang," she cried, "gather around! Here's a preacher from the press. Buy him a drink. But him two. Buy him three. He's thinking of things that shouldn't be thought of. Let's all go. Whoopee!" . . .

And there, Norman, you have the opinions of two people on your question. Perhaps you understand now why I always say that I am not wise enough to answer questions like yours.

But look, pal, I might try to give you some sort of an answer at that. I'll do it in the form of a little fable that I read in a magazine some eight or 10 years ago. I cannot remember it all—but it went something like this:

John Jones was born in 1840. At the age of 20 he decided to study law. At the age of 25 he decided that law was not what he wanted. So he joined a chorus. At the age of 30 he settled down in a small town. He had always wanted to remain single. But he married just the same.

At the age of 40 he felt that his ideas were liberal. He urged freedom upon the children of his town. He advocated free thought. He was as free a thinking gentleman as ever lived.

At the age of 50 he suddenly experienced a change of heart. He suddenly discovered that he had been all wrong in his ideas. He became a reformer. He joined this movement and that. He was elected secretary of the local chamber of commerce. He felt that the whole world centered upon him. And he lived up to these thoughts.

At the age of 60 he died. But, until he drew his last breath, he felt that the problems of the world rested upon his shoulders. He knew that he was very, very important.

They put a tombstone over his body. It read:

Here lies
John Jones
1840-1900
"A true and honest man."

The years passed. There came snow and sleet and hail and rain. In 1930 someone bent over that grave. And that someone read:

John Jones

Don't Let Yourself Fall in Love With a Dream

Why can't [illegible] find a boy friend?

It isn't the boys' fault. They don't neglect her or forget her. In fact they treat her like a million ... take her out to dine and dance ... even pop the question. Yet she's always forlorn—for she can't find her "ideal man."

So she sighs and moans while all her chums march up the wedding aisle and go blissfully to housekeeping.

"What's wrong?" she wails.

Do you know the secret?

CAN'T MEET IDEAL

"Dear Sally:

"I guess it's going to sound like an awful [illegible] thing to ask but [illegible] is a serious problem [illegible].

"Sally, why can't I fall in love?

"All my girl friends fall in love. They all seem to meet their ideal man. Why can't I? I am not [illegible]. That isn't my trouble. I have lots of dates and have had several nice fellows ask me to marry them. But I can't seem to get excited about any of them and I will have to be crazy about the man I marry.

"I am getting badly worried about this. I am 20 now and all my girl friends tease me and tell me that I won't ever care for anyone and that scares me because I do want to fall in love and get married.

"Is there something wrong with me? What can I do to meet the 'one man?' I go to dances and meet new fellows who take me home but somehow the fellows I meet at these dances aren't the type I could care for.

BROKE ENGAGEMENT

"I have been engaged even but I discovered after a while that I didn't care deeply enough for the man I was engaged to, so I broke it off. I go to parties and other couples are sitting in corners, head over heels in love with each other but I am not in love with my date for the evening, and that makes me feel bad, because I want to love someone, too, and I won't pet unless I care for him.

"I have heard of girls who just 'aren't the type' to fall in love—could it be possible that I am one of those? Gosh! I hope not. Tell me—please—how can I meet my ideal? What shall I do to meet him? I'll be watching for your answer. JUDY."

Why can't you fall in love?

Well, you haven't given yourself much of a chance yet, honey. Twenty isn't such an enormous age—girls have been known to totter to the altar even at 21. But kidding aside, I suspect that I know one reason why you can't fall in love.

Because you're in love already. In love with a dream!

Beside whom the ordinary male naturally looks like a plugged nickel.

Why did you invent this dream?

Partly because you're very fond of Judy and you think she should have Something Particularly Classy in the way of a mate. And partly because you're afraid.

WAITS IN VAIN

Afraid of life. Afraid of being hurt and disappointed and bored—as you might possibly be by a Regular Guy.

So long ago you decided that you wouldn't take any chances with love until your ideal came along. And now you're Waiting.

But you wait in vain, Judy dear.

For there ain't no such animal.

Somewhere there is a lover for you, but he isn't a Perfect Man. He has a score of traits you won't like. He may be bow-legged, snub-nosed, freckled, and have warts. He may stutter and spill things and seem generally a mess. Yet, when you find him, he'll seem more wonderful than all your dreams, and between spats you'll find heaven together.

But how can you find him? By being willing to find him. By stopping running away from him. By fitting yourself to folks, instead of fitting folks to Judy. Then you'll discover the most amazing wonders in even the plainest humans.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Mixed Diet Essential to Continued Health

Dr. Copeland

Some time ago, in discussing high blood pressure, I told you about a report made regarding the health of Eskimos. These people live on an exclusive diet of meat. Yet, it is stated, Eskimos show no more high blood pressure or signs of kindey disease than other races.

The wisdom of eating meat has always been under discussion. There is much controversy as to whether or not meat is harmful to the body.

It is claimed by some that by nature man is a vegetable-eating, not a meat-eating animal. Nevertheless, no scientific proof of this statement has ever been made.

It is true, of course, that many persons thrive on a vegetable diet, perhaps more than when they eat meat. But these occasional cases are no proof that meat is harmful.

On the other hand, there are many scientists who claim that meat, even if taken in large quantities, does no harm whatever. The health of the Eskimos shows this. Some go as far as to claim that meat can be used as an exclusive diet with marked advantage to health.

It seems to me that the answer to this problem is an individual one. Each of us must solve it for himself. It is certainly true that over-indulgence in any one food is not to be recommended. Some individuals will thrive when more vegetables are added to the diet. Others fail to respond to such a diet and are better if more meat is consumed.

There is no doubt that the ideal diet is a mixed one. By means of a mixed diet, the body obtains all of the necessary requirements and substances so essential for health.

Meat plays a part in maintaining the normal mechanism of the body and, except with difficulty, cannot be replaced by any other substances. It is also essential that the body have certain fruits and vegetables.

Let us not be narrow-minded about the eating habits of our friends. Certainly there is no scientific proof that a purely vegetable diet is superior to a meat diet. The logical thing is to conclude that a mixed diet is the desirable one.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Mourning Attire

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My brother died a short time ago and I would like to know how long I should dress in mourning for him.

Is it necessary to wear all black? May I wear black and white? Is it proper to wear all white?

If age makes any difference I will advise that my brother was eight years old. S.

Today, when the wearing of mourning is so casual and so comparatively little done, especially for such a young person, it is not at all necessary for you to wear mourning at all. Of course this depends on how you feel about it, and if you wish to wear it and it makes you feel a comfort that not wearing mourning does not give you, by all means wear it, and for as long as you wish.

All-white is as "deep" mourning as all-black, and most people wear the all-white mourning in summer and in the house. Also so many fashions now are shown in black and white that this would be an easy and convenient mode for you to adopt.

Never Omit the Title

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My employer and I disagree on the following points:

1. When writing a letter, business or otherwise, to a man, is it proper to omit the title of "Mr." from the address in the letter?

2. Which is correct? My residence address is—or my residential address is? D.O.

1. No. Always we should use a title with a name when we address a letter.

2. Better than either ... my home address is, for this is simpler.

Leaving a Visiting Card

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me whether or not to leave a card when calling on friends who do not have servants who open the door?

For instance, we recently moved into a new neighborhood and two women called on me (the first call) one afternoon when I was out. They left cards as I have one servant. However, as I am about to return the calls and they do not have servants and will likely answer the door themselves, should I say, "How do you do, Mrs. Blank. I am Mrs. So and So, your new neighbor" or should I present my card to the lady of the house? M. S.

Do not leave your card when you are making this call.

Now is the time for all good wives to come to the aid of their husbands.

Put your shoulder to the wheel and show what you can do in a crisis.

It is no time for pouting over economies which must be made. It is a time to pitch in and cheerfully do your own work, wear your old clothes and move into smaller quarters, if necessary.

It is no time to harp on losses or mistakes. No time to care what other people may think.

How willingly wives would follow their husbands into the wilds of the unexplored to share his dangers and adventures. Yet how many of them make a great fuss when they must give up a few luxuries and vanities.

Madge Realizes She Can't Send Letter to Jack Bickett

My fountain pen trailed into the annoying faint marks which signal the end of the ink, and when I had refilled it I read over my letter to my brother-cousin, Jack Bickett, in which I had told him of the treachery of the "wilderness woman," Ruth Allen, the sister of his associate in the South American enterprises.

I had not minced words, I told myself, but then, neither had she in her cool proposal that Katherine should give her husband up to her. I began to write again with the feeling that no matter what I might say I could not equal the venom of Ruth Allen's letter.

"Katherine does not know that I am writing this," I went on. "Indeed, she made me promise that I would not show the letter to you. I am keeping the letter of that promise, for the original is locked in my desk, and I have not exaggerated the woman's language, but have given you a true account of her venomous effrontery.

"May I ask that, for my sake, your own and Katherine's—you do not show this letter of mine to Mrs. Allen or let her know that you have received it? This will be hard I know, and I fully sympathize with the impulse you will have to tell her what you think, but she is not worth anger. She is one of those persons, I am sure, who revel in rows, and I trust you will not give her the opportunity to indulge herself in one."

I smiled to myself grimly as I penned the words. If Ruth Allen did get hold of this letter, she would not particularly enjoy it.

"I do not think Katherine will ever tell you that she has received this letter unless you speak of it yourself," I wrote. "As for her reactions to it—I am not betraying those. You know your wife—you can imagine what she is thinking.

"I am counting on you not to write her that I have told you about this. When you come home, I will tell her what I wrote you, but not until then. But, Jack, if you value your happiness, you will write to Katherine, telling her of the letters you have sent her and that you have received none from her—I am banking upon those two premises and the hypothesis that Mrs. Allen could tell you where all the missing letters are. And you will also see to it that you mail this letter yourself without her aid.

"Please forgive me for what you may consider unwarranted interference with your affairs. But—I cannot help it.

"Affectionately,

"MARGARET."

I read the letter over, inclosed it in an envelope which I typed, "Jack Bickett, personal," and then inclosed the sealed envelope in the letter which I had written to Miss Halkett. I sealed and stamped it and put it in a little rack on top of my desk, where I always keep letters for the post until there is a chance of sending them to the village. Then, with my brain approving my action and my conscience as fiercely disapproving, I went out into the hall, pausing at the door of the upper veranda for a word with Katherine.

"I find I can't rest in my room—there's no breeze on that side," I told her. "I'm going down to stretch out in the hammock on the side veranda."

It was with an effort that I kept my voice steady, for she had not heard me as I came along the hall, and I had seen her bending over my baby's carriage with a look upon her face which caught at my heart as if it were a clutching hand.

Adoration was in that look, as well as the tragedy of frustrated motherhood, which I knew was hers. And I was not exactly proud of my reaction to the sight of her emotion.

In Katherine's eyes, as she turned them toward me, was—or did I fancy it?—a look of confusion, almost of embarrassment. But, if it were there, it was gone as quickly as it had appeared, and it was with her usual composed voice and mien that she answered me.

"A most excellent idea," she said. "Your nurse fully approves—that is if you really lie down when you get down there, and don't snap into your usual stunt of furnishing steam for the whole household."

"You're mixed up in your seasons," I told her lightly as I turned away, "there's no steam needed this weather." I was ashamed of the banal jest, but felt like snatching at anything to cover my astonishment at the rapidity with which she had recovered her pose. If I had not seen her agitation I should never have dreamed that less than half an hour had passed since I had seen her shaken with grief, humiliation and rage over the venomous letter which Ruth Allen had written her.

"Trust you to find some excuse for generating it, nevertheless," she called after me, and I found myself wondering, a bit shamefacedly, if behind Katherine's words there might be a secret interpretation of that "steam furnishing" which would be spelled "officiousness."

It was a thought which lingered with me as I stretched out in the couch-hammock on the side veranda, for I found myself suddenly fatigued and thoroughly let-down in body and spirit. And when, two hours after, I awakened from a refreshing nap, it was the first thing which came to my mind. And suddenly, like a flash of sheet-lightning, there came to me the conviction, that, no matter what happened, I could not send that letter to Jack Bickett.

Limiting Children's Hopes

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

I think you'll agree that, if we hear a statement made over and over and over, we finally come to believe it. It is particularly true with children who credit us older folk with being a good deal wiser than we really are.

The mother who says in a child's presence: "My boy could be a big man, too, if we could afford to send him away to school," or "Mary is musical, but she'll never be able to play, we haven't money for a piano and lessons," or (as a mother told me recently) "My children can't expect anything from life except to grub and work. We're poor folks and we can't hope to be anything else"—the parent who makes such remarks in front of his child is guilty of seriously limiting that child.

To plant in a boy's mind the idea that Fate has destined him to be a nobody, just because he can't get on a train and attend school in a different city, is a silly and vicious act.

Why not tell him the TRUTH, which is that many and many a boy, given the courageous spirit, has pulled himself out of mediocre surroundings through study at night, through library study, through a correspondence course, through any of the hundreds of channels which are open to anyone who WANTS to succeed and who has the idea that through his own efforts he CAN succeed?

This applys to all the limiting remarks stated here and all those we hear made to children. When we inform a child that circumstances have limited him in ANY way, he is apt to believe it, which is indeed a pity. Why not teach him courage and resourcefulness? And a little more faith in a father who surely helps us when our desires are RIGHT wouldn't come amiss either.

No matter how much you feel your child is limited, DON'T tell him about it. Tell him everything you can think of that may help him free himself from those limitations, for nothing is impossible if the individual tries hard and earnestly enough.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Puffy tissues under the eyes may be due to fatigue, lack of sleep, or constipation. No cosmetic will have much effect upon them. Bathing first with hot water, then with cold, may make them less apparent. Drink plenty of fruit juices and water. Keep the intestinal tract active.

To discover your special design for cheek coloring, apply cold compresses, holding them close to the face for five minutes, repeating frequently. Where the cheeks take on pinkness, that's where rouge should be. Remember, rouge forms a shadow. If cheek bones are high, cover them with a bit of war paint; they will appear not so prominent.

There's nothing very terrible, devastating or poisonous about make-up; the cosmetic crime is in its abuse, plying the paint too generously, shadowing the eyelids too deeply. The middle-aged woman can lop off the years by discriminating use of factory blushes, or she can make herself look haggard and blowsy by using too much. There is a type of olive-skinned, dark-eyed loveliness that should never tint the cheeks, though lip rouge makes her countenance more vivid and interesting. A little bit of eyelash darkener goes a long way. Remember that, baby doll, when you take up the crayon and feel ambititious.

-:- Hints for the Household -:-

Jam ferments rapidly if kept in a damp larder. A two-pound jar of lime placed on the floor under the shelves will quickly absorb dampness.

A piece of horseradish placed in a jar of pickles will keep the vinegar from losing its strength. The pickles will not become soft or mouldy.

To clean an enameled bath, use a cloth sprinkled with paraffin and dipped in salt, afterwards rinse well. This will not hurt the surface of the bath.

If tap water is used for washing, add a few drops of glycerine before immersing the material. This not only renders the water soft, but helps to remove dirt.

WELFARE FUND ADDS 7 GROUPS

Announcement has been made of the addition of seven new groups to the membership of the Welfare Fund of Pittsburgh to aid in the joint campaign November 7-21 of the Fund and the Allegheny County Emergency Association to raise $5,500,000.

The new groups are the Boy Scouts of Allegheny County, East Borough Council, the Conference of Catholic Charities, the Epworth Fresh Air Home, the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, the Registry for Mothers' Milk, the Y. M. C. A. and the Zoar Home for Babies. The additions bring the total membership of the Fund to 48 agencies as against 29 last year, allowing increased savings in the financing of the welfare program, A. K. Oliver, president, said.

TRADE SURVEY GROUP TO MEET

The application in Pittsburgh this fall of the results of a governmental food product survey in Louisville will be discussed by J. W. Millard, of New York, former member of the Department of Commerce, in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium tonight. Nearly 1,200 business men are expected to attend the meeting, sponsored by the Pittsburgh Association of Manufacturers' Representatives.

The survey in Pittsburgh will be headed by G. E. Bittner, of the Department of Commerce. Other officers are C. A. Kolb, president; Donald Brigham, vice president; J. M. Nevin, treasurer, and D. J. Howard, secretary.

BANQUET OPENS MARKET WEEK

The first definite effort of Pittsburgh jobbers to recapture the trade of the tri-state area will be made tomorrow night at the banquet in the Chamber of Commerce which will officially open the "Fall Market Week" here. The plan of the project is to state the movement to establish Pittsburgh as the shopping center of the tri-state area, officials said.

Edgar J. Kaufmann, president of Kaufmann's department store, will talk on "What Lies Ahead in Merchandising," and James Francis Burke, general counsel of the chamber, will speak on "Pittsburgh Business."

2 New Flights Link Pittsburgh and Ohio

Inauguration of direct air service between Pittsburgh, Dayton and Springfield, O., was to be made today by Transcontinental-Western Air, Inc., according to official announcement. The service will be operated in conjunction with two flights of the service between Pittsburgh, Columbus, Fort Wayne and Chicago.

The westbound plane was scheduled to leave Pittsburgh daily at 12:40 p. m., and the eastbound plane is scheduled to arrive here at 2:55 p. m.

Red Cross Secretary To Address Nurses

Mabel Boardman, secretary of the American National Red Cross, will be one of the speakers at the twenty-ninth annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Nurses' Association to be held here October 26 to 30. More than 900 nurses are to attend the convention, a joint session of the Pennsylvania State League of Nursing Education and the Pennsylvania State Organization for Public Health Nursing.

Robertson to Speak On Firm's Progress

A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, will be guest speaker at the "Westinghouse day" luncheon to be held by the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce Thursday noon. J. Dawson Callery, chairman of the board of the Pittsburgh Railways Company, will introduce the speaker. Robertson will speak on "Westinghouse—Two Generations of Progress." His talk will be broadcast by radio.

2 Families Escape When Home Burns

Firemen from Swissvale and Braddock battled for more than an hour last night to control flames which damaged a residence at Braddock avenue and Ocean street. Officials said they believed the fire was caused by a faulty water heater. The families of William Morris and Joseph Badalli, residents of the house, escaped unhurt, police said.

Election to Feature Allied Boards' Meet

The election of directors will feature the first monthly meeting of the Allied Boards of Trade to be held Wednesday night. Dr. A. L. Lewin, chairman of the nominating committee, has filed the following names for election as directors: Harry Bastow, W. G. Negley, A. C. MacCumber, J. J. Munn, Joseph A. Heyl and Brook N. Edmonston.

Bond Man to Address Real Estate Board

Charles W. Carlson, manager of the Pennsylvania-United States Bond and Mortgage Corporation, will be the principal speaker at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board tomorrow in William Penn Hotel. He will speak on "The Mortgage Situation."

Jane Regny's New Two-Piece Woolen Frock of Two Fabrics

Ribbed woolen jersey contrasted with other cloths, was an outstanding feature of sports frocks in the Paris openings. In this copy of a recently landed Regny model, a meshy ribbed jersey is combined with an interesting, uneven-surfaced wool eponge.

The blouse of the frock is inset, bordered and belted with the jersey, in orange with brown eponge, Spanish tile with brown, and Persian green with black. Introduced in the Sportswear Shop, in misses' sizes 14 to 18, priced $19.75.

Barbara Lee Creates a New Triple-Duty Silk Costume

This versatile, two-piece costume was inspired by Marthe Renee's "Indispensable," and is adaptable to wear for a morning in town, a formal or informal afternoon party, and for an evening that may include a "little" dinner, and bridge or the theatre afterward.

Its soft wrap-around, tie-on jacket gives no hint that it is a jacket, until one begins to remove it to show the light-topped, short-sleeved frock beneath.

Women's sizes, $39.50.

1500 Pairs Curtains
Choice of Five Styles

$1.55 Pair

A complete selection of the newest styles in curtains and panels suitable for every room . . . grouped at two low prices that permit re-curtaining the whole house at moderate expenditure.

A. Ecru Filet Net Curtains in four different patterns.

B. Cream or Ecru Marquisette with point d'esprit dot. Also with larger self dot.

C. Ecru tailored Marquisette with 3-inch hem and heading.

D. Cream or ecru Marquisette with 4-inch ruffle and Priscilla valance.

Panels 95c

F. One of the newest of panels, counterparts of those selling at many times this price. Cream or ecru marquisette—woven with a border and center design in combinations of orchid-green-rose, green-gold-rose or rose-blue-gold. Each panel is 38 inches wide.

G. Fringed panels in ecru voile or marquisette—2¼ yards long.

What Make-Up to Wear With the New Costume Colors?

Is Answered by Elizabeth Arden Here This Week

A smart new idea in make-up is being presented by the Toiletries Section this week . . . the Arden way of harmonizing your make-up with the lovely new fall costume colors!

Elizabeth Arden's personal assistant has come from the New York Salon for private consultation. She will analyze your complexion tones, and create for you the precise make-up to make the new colors flattering to your individual type—the correct Arden rouge, lipstick, powder, mascara, and eye-shadow to wear with every shade!

Come in any day this week to learn this successful new idea of make-up and costume color co-ordination.

For privacy in consultation, Miss Arden's assistant will hold personal interviews in the Galleries of Intimate Apparel, on the Second Floor. Telephone the Toiletries Section for an appointment.

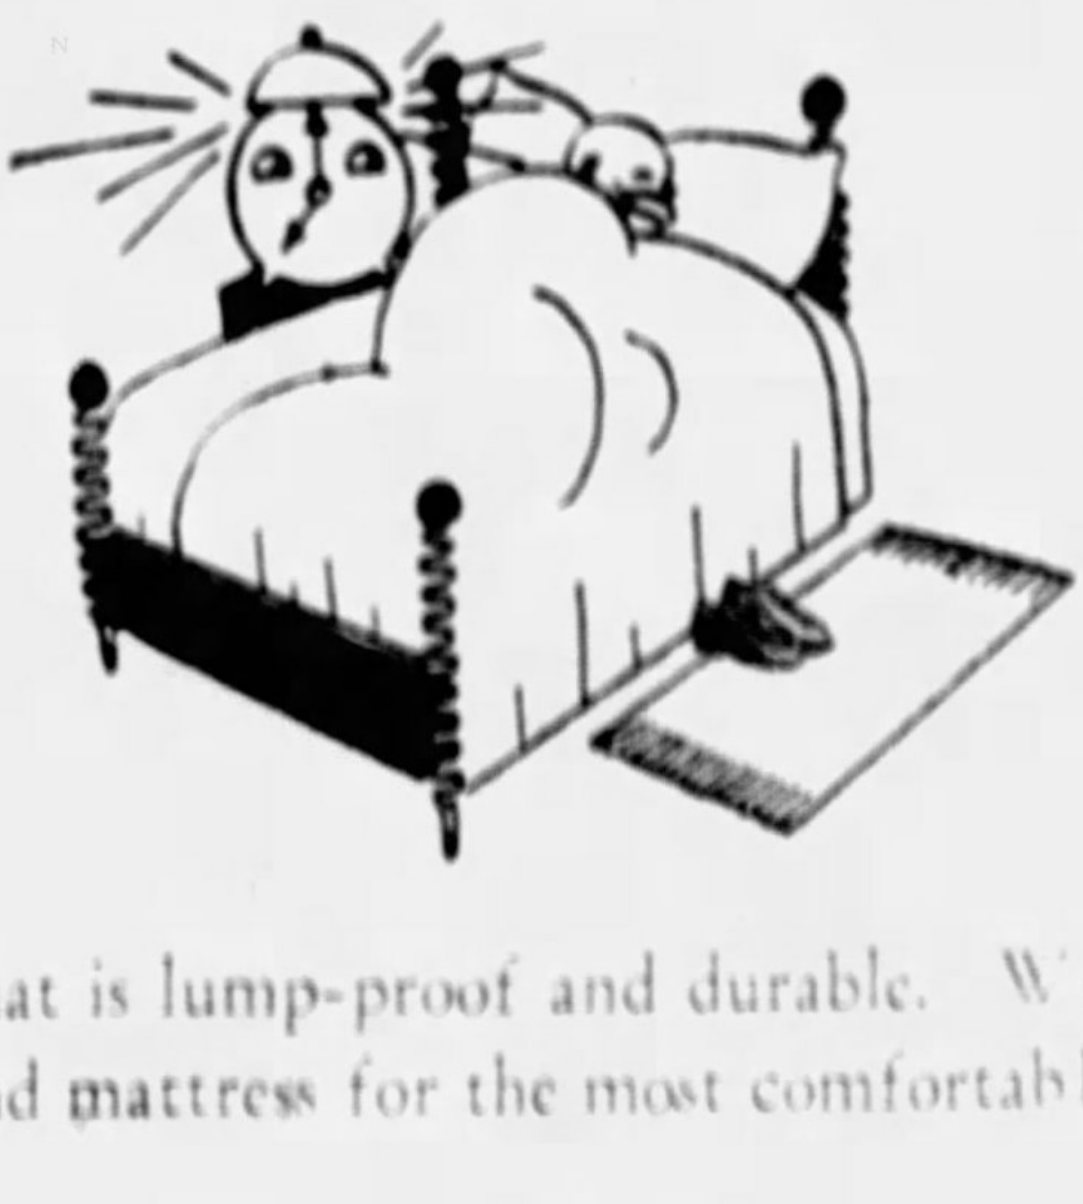
For the Best Night's Rest You Ever Had



You are best prepared for a hard day's work when you've spent the night completely relaxed and entirely comfortable—and a good mattress and springs are the essentials. It's economy to spend the few dollars difference between the price of a cheap mattress and one filled with clean white cotton felt that is lump-proof and durable. We suggest this combination of springs and mattress for the most comfortable sleep you've ever had.

Cotton Felt Mattress
$29.50

Last year this self-same mattress was priced $42.50! This mattress contains 50 lbs. of pure cotton felt . . . the very best kind . . . covered with heavy, striped ticking, and finished with the wearable and trim Imperial edge.

Double-Deck Springs
$10

Double-deck springs—firm but resilient, and the finishing touch to this comfort ensemble. It is on a par in quality with the mattress, and we know you'll never know a night of discomfort with this duo.

We Now Present

By Darrell V. Martin
Radio Editor

Darrell V. Martin

CARPENTERS' HAMMERS stopped clamping in Duquesne Garden at noon today and the immense auditorium presented a holiday picture of bunting and golden stems as James A. Simpson, director, made final arrangements for the sixth annual Radio-Electrical Show opening at 7 o'clock tonight. Frank R. Phillips, president of the Philadelphia Company, and Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, will open the show officially in special broadcasts over KQV at 8:30 and WCAE at 9. . . . The advance sale of tickets has been the heaviest in the history of the show and preparations have been made to handle a crowd of 20,000 tonight.

Ruth Cambridge, Walter Winchell's secretary, is to be interviewed on WJAS at 5:45 this afternoon. Miss Cambridge, a former Pittsburgh girl, frequently writes Winchell's column under the title "A Columnist's Sec'y's Jots Down a Few Notes."

Choice Bits Tonight

Return of the Lumberjacks via WCAE at 7 . . . those in the cast of Death Valley Days will step out of character to greet you on their anniversary program over KDKA at 8:30 . . . on WCAE at 8:30 Gladys Rice singing "My Hero" and James Melton "When You're Away" . . . Phil Dewey's commanding voice is aptly suited to Speaks' "Road to Mandalay" on WCAE at 9:30, the same program that will offer the Revelers Quartet in Nevin's "Venetian Love Song."

Question a Day:

In your column some time ago you mentioned that "The Flying Dutchman" would be dramatized. Have I missed it?—Billie G., Oil City, Pa.

Answer—No. The ancient, picturesque legend of the Flying Dutchman and his beloved Senta will be presented over a Columbia network, including WJAS, this Sunday at 9:30. Alice Brady, star of the Theater Guild, will play Senta and John Anthony, another Broadway favorite, will enact the role of The Flying Dutchman.

THE LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Radio Show week is hard on the gentlemen of the press. It keeps them closer to the ink pot, keeps them up nights, keeps them in a continuous razzle-dazzle.

Bulletins pour from mimeograph machines. All the latest dope about radio sets, about television, about a hundred and one gadgets that make up the new amusement background of America. Invitations to this, to that; requests to give this little girl a great big headline. When the week is over the gentlemen of the press are in a fine state of the jitters.

For them the week's social activities are heavy and clamorous. The bleat of ballyhoo is insistent, and compositors are waiting for copy. What to do, what to do. You run around in circles, you become groggy from reading television predictions, from separating the chaff from press agents' wheat. A nightmare of madhouse confusion steals over you. What a nightmare! . . . "The Moon Comes Over the Mountain" . . . Sarnoff and radio queen in glass case at Madison Square Garden . . . a big black Negro aimlessly, endlessly beats a big bass drum . . . "Carolina Moon Keeps Shining" . . . television is just around the morner, television is just around the corner . . . now, you take this set, such sensitivity, such selectivity . . . I'll meet ya in room 1629 . . . ha-cha-cha, ha-cha-cha . . . "Life is Just a Bowl of Cherries."

Between nightmares the gentlemen of the press are rushed to the entertainment camps specially provided by the radio rajahs. Stars, stars, stars—more stars than you can shake a pen at, all doing their stuff that the compositors may not be idle, that press agents' salaries may not be cut. A dinner thrown by the NBC at the New Yorker Hotel followed by a parade of the radio army. And the very next night, at the same New Yorker, a dance sponsored by Columbia. Such whipping-up of the blood. And gentlemen of the press are not used to whipping-up of the blood . . . save at Tony's, three steps down and ring twice.

The NBC's parade was like one of those benefit shows that Broadway offers every Sunday night all winter long. So much entertainment that you become palsied, glazed of eye, tone-deaf staring and listening to it.

There is no substitute for S.S.S.

Secure S.S.S. from your own druggist . . . with few exceptions druggists are ethical and conscientious, and will not offer a substitute.

No medicine has the same formula as this time-tested Blood Tonic . . . nor does any other concern gather the same roots with their own trained collectors and extract the active medicinal principles, unchanged, in their original fresh state—this is the secret of S.S.S. . . . there is no substitute.

Bodily vitality . . . the urge to be up and doing, depends upon the right number of red cells.

A low red-blood-cell count often exhibits itself in one or more of the following symptoms: — paleness, quick fatigue, lack of normal resistance to disease, pimples, boils, and general run-down condition.

A lagging appetite often leads to underweight and ill health in various manifestations.

Take S.S.S. as a tonic and notice how much better you will "feel" . . . it has effect in aiding Nature to build red-blood-cells and creating an appetite for food. These two things working together aid the human body in its struggle for health and vitality.

S.S.S. has been time tested for generations . . . millions of people approve its value . . . it makes for better health and happiness.

Why not start taking S.S.S. today? Seldom will a dealer offer a substitute—in such cases insist on S.S.S. the original . . . in two sizes, large and small, the larger size is more economical.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Events

In Mayfair

—With—

Patricia Pitt

Every Saturday since the end of August has boasted of some marked attraction for the social set, have you realized? There have been horse shows and horse shows, hunter trials, and weddings. And this Saturday will be another red letter day.

The event of this week's Saturday is the annual Sewickley Kennel Club Dog Show, an all-day affair held in the show ring of the Allegheny Country Club.

Folks will be coming and going all day with others remaining for all the judging. For the most faithful spectators a refreshment booth will be conducted. And there'll be some small informal luncheons at the Allegheny Country Club and at Sewickley homes.

Return From East

The Donald Scott Rodgerses have returned from Cohasset, Mass., and are at home in Sewickley. Mrs. Rodgers is the former Mrs. Elizabeth Rodgers Blair. Their wedding took place in August at the summer home of the bride's mother, Mrs. William S. Rodgers, at Cohasset, Mass.

Mrs. James Wolstoncraft Henry, Jr., will be matron of honor and Mr. Henry will be best man at the marriage of his sister, Frances Henry, to James Samuel O'Neil of New York, on October 24.

The bride-elect is the daughter of the James W. Henrys, of Bigelow boulevard, and her fiance is a son of the James O. O'Neils, of Jackson City, Mich.

Miss Mary Louise Scott Marries P. B. Sullivan

The marriage of Miss Mary Louise Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Scott, of McKeesport, to Philip B. Sullivan, son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Sullivan, also of McKeesport, was solemnized Thursday morning in St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church at 9 o'clock. Officiating was the Rev. P. J. O'Connor with a nuptial high mass. The altar was massed with cibotium ferns and gladioli. Miss Mollie Marhary played the wedding music, and Martin Griffen sang.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a princess gown of ivory satin with a Juliet cap of white transparent velvet, and carried bridal roses showered with lilies of the valley. Miss Helen Scott was her sister's maid of honor, and wore a gown of pink satin with a matching hat and carried pink roses. The bridesmaids included Miss Matilda Sullivan and Miss Helen Carey, who wore similar gowns of blue satin with pink hats, and carried pink roses. The bride's mother chose brown satin for her gown and the bridegroom's mother wore brown transparent velvet with a matching hat. Both wore shoulder sprays of pink roses.

J. Paul Farrell served as best man, and the ushers included William F. Sullivan Jr., and Melvin McChesney.

A breakfast in the Penn-McKee Hotel was given after the ceremony, for the immediate families. Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan left on a motor trip to Philadelphia, New York and Washington, and upon their return will be at home in Versailles avenue.

Gladys Mae Schofield Marries Thomas R. Wild

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Gladys May Schofield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schofield, of Perrysville avenue, North Side, to Thomas R. Wild, of Beechview, which was solemnized Saturday, September 19, in the Schofield home. Only the members of the families and a few friends attended the ceremony, at which the Rev. Dr. J. Alvin Orr officiated.

The bride wore the wedding gown of her sister, Mrs. R. J. Thompson, of Lakewood, O., which was fashioned of French embroidered net over ivory taffeta. Her bouquet was of bridal roses. The maid of honor was Miss Alice E. Paulson, who wore a frock of embroidered organdie over coral silk, and carried an arm bouquet of Ophelia roses. Serving as best man was Roland Jackson, of Ambridge.

After the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Wild left for Washington, and after October 15 will reside in Vinceton street, North Side.

Ruth Stitt Sauvain's Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sauvain, of South Lang avenue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ruth Stitt Sauvain, to Glenn W. Bunting, of Chicago, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Bunting, of Albion, Ill. The announcement was made Saturday at a luncheon which Mrs. Sauvain gave at her home. Miss Sauvain attended Redlands University, Redlands, Cal., and was graduated from the University of Pittsburgh. Her fiance was graduated from the University of Illinois. Their wedding will not take place until June of next year.

Nobel Winner Will Test Rays in Alps

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—(AP)—Prof. Arthur H. Compton, University of Chicago physicist, a Nobel prize winner, who returned to Chicago Saturday after conducting a series of experiments with the cosmic rays in the Rocky Mountains, will depart for Europe tonight to conduct further experiments to determine the intensity of the rays in the Alps as compared with the Rockies.

Movie Chairman Will Address Cinema Meet

To cross the Atlantic Ocean, intending to remain on the other side for only three days, is something of a record. But that's precisely what Mrs. Ambrose Nevin Diehl is doing. Mrs. Diehl sails tonight on the Europa for Rome, where she will be from October 5 to 8. She goes there as chairman of motion pictures for the National Council of Women to address the International Council of Women, which is holding an educational cinematographic institute under auspices of the League of Nations.

Mrs. Diehl expects to get back in time to attend the last few days' session of the State Federation convention in York the week of October 12.

Pitt Women

Meeting on the second Wednesday afternoon of each month in the Faculty Club, members of the Women's Association of the University of Pittsburgh will find diversified programs prepared for them. Mrs. F. W. Shockley and her board have outlined their year, beginning with a reception for the newcomers in October. Mrs. Edward O. Tabor will give a costume song recital as the chief program feature of that event. The women will visit the international art exhibit in November.

The December meeting will be held in the evening and will be addressed by Dr. Charles Arbuthnot, who will have "Game Fields of North America" as his subject. In January Dr. Norman McClintock will give an illustrated talk on "Rythms in Plant Growth."

The February meeting will also serve as a Washington bi-centennial celebration and will have Dr. John W. Oliver, of Pitt's history department, as the speaker. At this meeting the association will follow its custom of annually entertaining the wives of the Carnegie Tech faculty and the faculty of the Pennsylvania College for Women. The Taylor Allderdice High School Quartet will furnish music. "Girls in Industry" is to be discussed by Miss Helen Crowley, Y. W. C. A. Metropolitan secretary, in March; April brings the annual luncheon and a cartoon talk by Cyrus Hungerford, of the Post-Gazette.

In addition to these general meetings, a bridge luncheon will be held every month at the Ruskin, the readers group will meet the third Wednesday of each month; the Newcomers will meet the last Wednesday of each month and the junior activities committee has planned several entertainments for the children of the faculty members.

The Rodef Shalom Sisterhood is sponsoring a new project—the canning of fruits and vegetables for the use of the needy during the winter months. A large committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Aaron Cohen is telephoning each member and asking her to can fruits and vegetables and donate them to the Sisterhood supply. The fruits and vegetables when canned will be stored at the Y. M. and W. H. A. and will be distributed by the Jewish Family Welfare Association as needed.

Clairton Events

"Hope for the best, get ready for the worst and take what the committee sends" is the advice given in the new year books of the Clairton Woman's Club. From the caliber of program as gleaned from the new year books, the "hopes" would seem to have the best of it.

Judge Sara Soffel is scheduled to address the club at its opening session on Thursday, but she is out of town, so the program committee will provide a substitute. The legislative department will have charge of a second October program. A visit to the International Art Exhibit, an essay contest for Book Week, a welfare sewing and the civic department program are other 1931 events.

In response to requests for a repetition of this program, one of the most popular of last year's outstanding books, plays and events of 1931 will be reviewed in January and the music department will have a program that month also. A speaker from Juvenile Court, a reception for new members, an anniversary party, talk by Mr. John G. Daub on Oberammergau and a discussion of "Alison's House" by Miss Thyrsa W. Amos, Pitt dean of women, are other anticipated events. A visit from Mrs. James G. Chalfant, chairman of education in the State Federation, is scheduled for April 21, two business meetings and a reception for the Clairton High School graduates completing the year. Mrs. Guy S. Johnston is president of the club.

Xantha R. Riggs Becomes Bride Of Ohio Man

Saturday evening at 8:45 o'clock in the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church of Squirrel Hill, Miss Xantha Roberta Riggs, daughter of Mrs. Gertrude Abbott, of Philadelphia, formerly of Pittsburgh, became the bride of Russell Ward Phillips, son of Mrs. Florence Phillips, of Columbus, O. The church was decorated with palms, ferns and chrysanthemums.

Miss Emily Crocker, of Binghamton, N. Y., as the maid of honor, wore a gown of pink lace with matching mits and carried tea roses. The bridesmaids included Miss Helen Wangaman, of Squirrel Hill, in yellow lace, carrying Talisman roses; Miss Mary V. Linderman, of Mt. Gilead, O., in green lace, carrying American Beauty roses, and Mrs. Harriette White, of Columbus, O., who wore orchid lace and carried yellow roses. They all wore mits to match their gowns. The little flower girl was Annabelle Gibson, of Canonsburg, who wore a frock of ice blue lace and carried rose petals. The bride's mother wore pink chiffon and Mrs. Phillips chose black georgette.

Serving as best man was Ned Phillips, of Detroit, brother of the bridegroom, and ushers included W. E. Dooley, of Pittsburgh; J. A. Mullens, of Rochester, N. Y., and H. P. White, of Columbus, O.

There was a reception later for 60 guests.

Rita LeRoy Weds Film Actors' Agent

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 28.—(AP)—A large company of motion picture notables attended the noon wedding in Temple Israel here yesterday of Benjamin Hirschfield, screen actors' agent, and Rita LeRoy, film actress. The matron of honor was June Clyde, actress wife of Thornton Freeland, director.

Research Worker Resigns Pitt Post

Dr. Ralph J. Watkins, director of the bureau of business research at the University of Pittsburgh, has announced the resignation of Murray Shields from the staff of the bureau. Shields has been assistant director in charge of trade research for some time. He is to become director of economic research for the Irving Trust Company of New York. Shields will be succeeded by Dr. J. P. Watson.

Broadcasting Firms Name 2 Executives

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(AP)—Appointment of John F. Royal and Roy C. Witmer as vice presidents of the National Broadcasting Company is announced by M. H. Aylesworth, president.

Royal formerly was director and program manager for WTAM, Cleveland, and Witmer came to New York from Norwalk, Conn.

Young Clergymen Warned of 'Ain't's' And Untidyness

GALESBURG, Ill., Sept. 28.—(AP.)—More ministers fail because of "spots on their vests and 'ain't' on their lips" than from any other cause, Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes told a class of 22 men who were ordained to the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church yesterday. He said:

"No man should say he is sanctified to the work of Our Lord when he habitually goes around looking like a pig. And how can you expect a man to win souls when he makes every intelligent person in his congregation cringe every time he speaks a sentence?"

Club Notes

Affairs In Avalon

For the remainder of its season, which opened this month, the Avalon Woman's Club has listed a fashion show with music, a Christmas party with an address by the Rev. Dr. John B. Magee, an illustrated lecture by Dr. Robert T. Hance, another by Anna Marshall McCracken, programs by the various departments of the club, a visit from Ish-Tah-Heah-Dehah, a Crow Indian chief, and the annual club luncheon at which Albert Kennedy Roswell, humorist, will be the chief attraction.

Invitations have been issued by the Brookside Woman's Club for a reception in honor of the president, Mrs. William P. Allen, on Tuesday, October 6, at the home of Mrs. E. Burt Nutt. Replies are being sent to Mrs. Merwin Bassol.

PALMER, LEWIS WEDDING QUIET

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(Universal.)—In Bar Harbor today Bertha Palmer, daughter of those pillars of Chicago society, Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer, will become the bride of Oakleigh Thorne Lewis, son of Mrs. Philip S. Chancellor, of this city and Santa Barbara, Cal.

According to word that reaches us from Mt. Desert Isle, plans for the wedding have been made with an eye to simplicity and only a small group of relatives and close friends will be present at the ceremony, to be solemnized at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Palmer, high up on a wooded hillside, overlooking the picturesque Frenchman's Bay.

Through his mother, the young man who is to marry the granddaughter of the late Mrs. Potter Palmer, the greatest social leader Chicago ever has known, is a grandson of Oakleigh Thorne, the celebrated New York banker and capitalist.

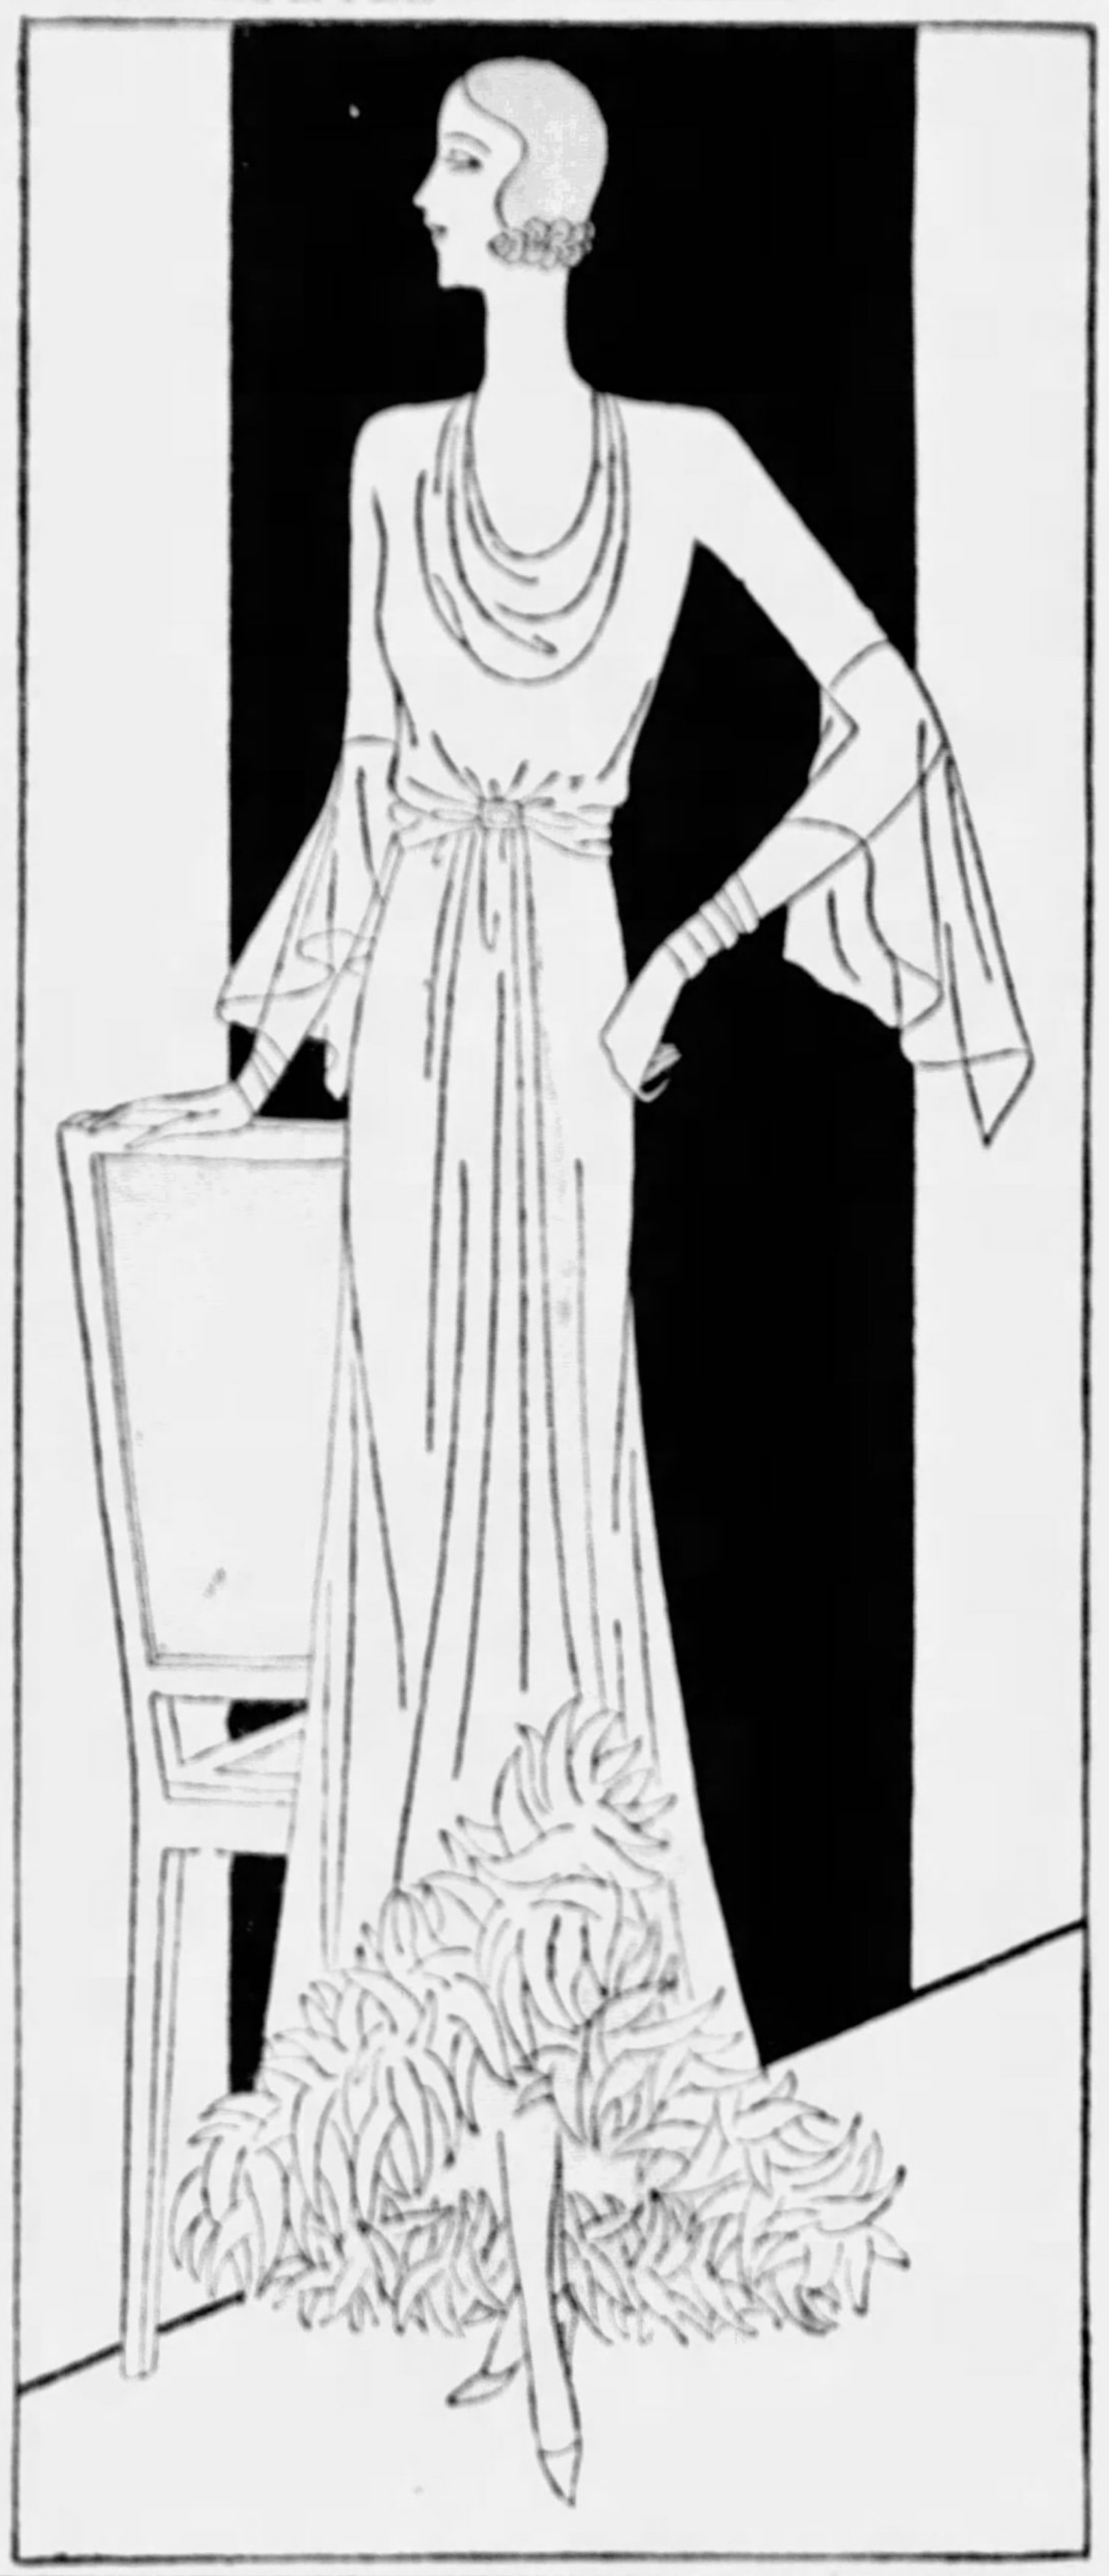
The bride made her debut three years ago when she was 17 and was presented to the King and Queen of England at one of the "courts" held at Buckingham Palace last May.

West View to Hear Talks on Sewer Loan

Dr. J. R. Conover, of the Pennsylvania State Health Department, will discuss the $75,000 bond issue for a new sewerage system in the borough of West View, which will be voted on by citizens of West View at the general election in November, at the monthly meeting of the West View Board of Trade tonight in the Highland School auditorium. L. S. Morgan, district engineer, will also speak.

A FEATHER-TRIMMED GARMENT DEMANDS PERFECTION IN DETAIL

Sketched in Paris



Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, Sept. 28.—Right now our feathered friends seem to mean those frocks or hats trimmed with feathers that are so kind and flattering. With the advent of the feather trimmed hat, it is not surprising that many designers are now showing frocks with feathered trimming a dominant feature. The hem seems to be assuming additional importance with the introduction of fur edged borders and now, with feather edges too. Of course such a frock is not meant for the woman who has to watch her wardrobe expenditures, but is rather for the fortunate woman who can afford one or two extra gowns—frocks that are obviously different from the prevailing mode and entirely more luxurious. A feather trimmed frock quite plainly demands perfection in detail, accessories and grooming, or else the effect would most likely be more sad than scintillating. As the evening coats, although we have seen one or two feather trimmed models, the majority of these wraps seem to be content to embellish themselves with fine furs to add charm to their svelte lines. Velvet continues the medium supreme for the evening wrap.

THE FROCK is a dinner dress by Maggy Rouff. It is of black chiffon. The skirt is softly draped in front and slightly lifted. It is edged with a striking band of irridescent coque feathers. The loosely draped cowl bodice is gathered into a jeweled buckle at the front of the waistline and the sleeves have wider circular flounces.

CATHOLIC GROUP OPPOSES DOLE

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Sept. 28.—(AP)—The task of providing employment for the nation's jobless was placed before municipal, state and federal governments by diocesan directors of Catholic charities, in session at a national conference here today.

Declaring themselves opposed to a dole because "it is destructive to self respect," the diocesan directors declared:

"The work programs of the states are limited by their financial resources. A federal work program is also necessary. We look to the President and Congress to provide such a program. The funds could be secured by a large bond issue."

Train Taking Girls To See Father Kills Him

NEW GLASGOW, N. S., Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Margaret and Catherine Wilkinson, one a registered nurse, came up from Boston today to visit their aged father, Augustine Chisholm Wilkinson, a Pictou County farmer and mail man.

Near their destination, their train ran down a track-walker. The nurse offered her assistance, but was told the man was dead. Arrived home, their two brothers met them and told them their father had gone to meet them.

When he didn't return, they started search for him, and found his body in the morgue. He was the man the train had run over.

TELLS OF GANG SLAYING OF 3

DETROIT, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Sol Levine, held under $500,000 bond as a material witness in the massacre of three racketeers in a fashionable Collingwood avenue apartment, today broke a long silence and gave police the "inside story" of the gangland murders.

According to Levine, the slain men, Hymie Paul, Joe Sutker and Joe Lebovitz, were called into a "gangsters' conference" by four members of Detroit's notorious Purple Gang who started an apparently pre-arranged argument over a "split" in dope-peddling and bootlegging enterprises.

Levine named four men as the killers. Three of them, Ray Burnstein, Irving Milberg and Harry Keywell, are under arrest and charged with murder. A fourth man is being sought by authorities.

Russia Bans Heat As First Snow Falls

MOSCOW, Sept. 28.—(AP)—The first snow of the winter fell today and householders in overcoats and galoshes found in the morning paper a decree forbidding all citizens to heat their homes without special authorization by the municipal government.

The decree is part of a campaign for economy of fuel because coal production is lagging far behind the five-year plan schedule.

BISHOPS STUDY DIVORCE CANON

DENVER, Col., Sept. 28.—(AP.)—The controversial problem of a marriage and divorce canon agreeable to all elements of the Protestant Episcopal Church was up before the house of bishops of the general convention here today.

A proposed canon adopted by the house of clerical and lay deputies has been rejected by the committee on canons of the house of bishops, which advanced a new plan of its own. The bishops and deputies are agreed on nearly all provisions except that regarding the status in the church of a divorced person who has been remarried.

Under the provision of the proposed canon adopted by the deputies, a divorced person remarried by a civil authority might petition an ecclesiastical court for recognition. In case of a favorable decision the new union would be blessed by a priest of the court and the petitioner would retain all communicant rights. The committee of the house of bishops recommends that no marriage of a divorced person be recognized unless the divorce has been granted on grounds of certain listed impediments to marriage, which existed before the solemnization of the ceremony.

Owner Blames Police In Theater Bombing

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Harry Lasker, owner of the Music Box Theater, a neighborhood house bombed yesterday, blamed police today for permitting a situation which permitted the violence.

Lasker is a member of the board of directors of the Allied Theater Owners' Association, which broke with the Motion Picture Operators' Union after its officials insisted that two operators be employed in each projection booth.

Auto Strikes Taxi, Rider Holds Thieves

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 28.—(AP.)—An automobile rammed the rear of a taxicab in which C. H. Baird was riding last night and, as he looked around, he saw his own automobile. He held the driver until police arrived. Officers said the drivers, Burman Bailey, 16, of Charleston, W. Va., and Newt Thornton, 17, Cincinnati, confessed theft of the machine.

Fires at Wife, Son; Commits Suicide

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Stanley Pielock, 36, a laborer, shot himself to death today in his home in Conshohocken near here after, police said, he fired three shots at his wife, Mary, 36, and one at his son, Frank, 15, when the boy sought to protect his mother.

Mother on Trial In Poisoning of Two

LEBANON, Ind., Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Mrs. Carrie Simmons, farm wife, went to trial today charged with the fatal poisoning of her two daughters, Virginia, 14, and Alice Jean, 10, who died of eating poisoned sandwiches at a family picnic.

REED BOOSTED BY 'HAM' LEWIS

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 28.—(AP)—J. Hamilton Lewis, United States Senator from Illinois, predicts that the next Democratic presidential candidate will be from the West and rates former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri as a strong possibility for the post.

"The conflict in Democracy in New York and eastern states calls for the naming of western candidates."

Speaking of Reed, who recently announced he would be a candidate if the Missouri delegation to the national convention so desired, Senator Lewis said:

"I know of no man who could obtain a larger support in Illinois for President than Senator Reed. And I am convinced no other man could marshal greater strength in the West than the man who represented Missouri in the United States Senate for 18 years."

Greta Garbo, Novarro In Same Picture

Greta Garbo and Ramon Novarro will appear together in a story based on the exploits of the European spy, Mata Hari, it is announced. This picture is now being prepared for early production on the coast, with a supporting cast and director soon to be announced. Miss Garbo has just completed work in an adaptation of David Graham Phillips' well-known novel, "Susan Lenox, Her Fall and Rise," while Novarro was last seen in the film "Son of India."

HARRIS CALLS VOTE MACHINE INQUIRY

Senatorial Committee Will Meet Wednesday to Sift Primary Failure Facts

Senator Frank J. Harris, chairman of the Senatorial investigating committee on voting machines, has called a meeting of the committee for Wednesday, as a result of the failure of the machines to function as expected in the recent primaries in Allegheny County.

In a statement issued today Senator Harris said:

"The senatorial investigating committee on voting machines will meet at 10 a. m., Wednesday, September 30, in the City-County Building.

'WIDESPREAD SCANDAL'

"As chairman of the committee, I have called this meeting because of the widespread scandal that surrounds the recent primaries in Allegheny County. Charges that the electorate was grossly interferred with in the exercise of its constitutional right of a free ballot and an honest count; public accusations against election boards; the failure of the voting machines to operate properly, whether due, as asserted by the Poole Engineering and Machine Company, to tampering with their mechanism, or, as the Citizens Committee on Voting Machines believes, to inherent mechanical defects, a condition against which this committee warned the County Commissioners and the public before the contract was let; or to the inexperience and inefficiency of those who were in charge of the operation of the machines; the open interference with voters and the various cases of violence—all make it imperative, however one's political bias may run, that the Senate committee shall convene at once and, sifting the facts from the mass of rumors, bring out of the chaos of the primaries an orderly, impartial understanding of just what did occur and what is the remedy.

CITES NEW YORK

"Information on the possession of the committee coming from various parts of the state where voting machines were properly used, show conclusively that they were effective, rapid and accurate, and this, coupled with the fact that they have been in successful operation for more than a quarter of a century in New York and elsewhere, scarcely admits of any controversy on the soundness of machines as a means for registering the will of the people at any election, and leaves the advocates of voting machines still confident that, under proper conditions with workable machines, under commonly intelligent operation, elections by this method offer the voters their best safeguard against fraud and their surest guarantee of a proper and speedy count of the ballot.

"The Senate committee is interested in findings of fact only, and its meeting on next Wednesday will endeavor to determine impartially just what did happen in Allegheny County at the recent primaries, why it happened and who or what is responsible for a condition that has made the state of Pennsylvania a byword in the land."

Things I Never Knew Till Now

(And they chain stores!)

That "conversation" was once a naughty word according to the very best dictionaries. (Did I blush?)

That if you throw a newly-born seal into the water it drowns.

That you've got to don a pair of velvet overshoes when you go shopping in Japan's largest department store.

That though Addison was a leading moralist, he imbibed plenty.

That the Cullinan diamond, weighing 305¾ karats uncut, was sent from Africa to London via ordinary parcel post.

That though the Battle of Manila Bay was fought continuously from 11 p. m. to 7:45 a. m., not one American was disabled, killed or wounded, although one American died! (He had a heart attack).

That if you breathe upon a diamond you can detect the flaws.

That the houses midway on the block on 126th Street on the extreme East Side are built upon an ancient graveyard. Boo!

That the South American deer fly is the fastest living thing on earth—traveling at 815 miles per hour—faster than sound!

That the graves in Arlington Cemetery have round and square tombstones—one for the known dead and the other for unknown.

That no vegetable's name starts with an "N." (Nonion?)

That "Journey's End," the war play, was produced originally for the good it might do, not for coin. It has earned millions for the backers, who figured on losing coin to spread anti-war propaganda.

That "Yankee Doodle" is the tune of an old English nursery song called "Lucy Locket," current in the time of Charles I.

That Edgar Street, in the Wall Street sector, is the shortest in New York. And there are but two houses, opposite each other, on it.

That Jeff Davis is called "King of Hoboes" because he has traveled 1,000,000 miles by rail without paying a penny fare.

That Mills Hotel lodgers, even though they rent their rooms by the week, must not occupy them between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

That the newspapers recently made a fuss about a cow with six legs. There's one in Ithaca, Mich., with eight legs.

That you can light an electric light sans a connection!

That "Hail, Columbia," was not written through patriotic motives, but because Fox, an actor, needed a new number for his show, and a patriotic theme was employed merely to insure a hit.

That in Great Britain you can post yourself as a letter.

That the late Frank Harris in his autobiog tells of a New Yorker getting downtown "by catching a train" in 1870. The first trains, the elevated railroad, were run in 1878. (So, there!)

That Georgia mileage tax law levies $1,000 on each out-of-town truck that goes marching through Georgia for more than 101 miles.

That the Tombs Prison warden is last-named Barr.

That all French contracts must be written upon a special bond paper, watermarked with a gov't seal, which costs 3 francs, 40 centimes. That's the reason Frenchies use both sides of the paper.

That in Madrid, Spain, you are furnished with books (free of charge) to read while sitting in the parks.

That broccoli (from Italy) can be grown here, but its seed cannot be reproduced here or in any other country.

That most of the "coonskin" coats worn by the collitch boys are made from the coyotes of the Western plains.

That in any lumber camp you'll find a white horse, used to round up mules, for mules will follow a white horse anywhere.

That the reason we say "God Bless You" after someone sneezes, is that during the time the Black Plague was raging in Europe one of the first symptoms of the disease was sneezing.

That there is a radio program on Satdee evenings for an Italian balm, but they carefully spell out the word b-a-l-m, because they are afraid it might be mistaken for bomb.

That the Washington correspondents who have been writing plenty on modification of the prohibition law may be interested to learn that, upon info right out of the feed box, no member of the President's cabinet has broached the subject to him, nor has he mentioned it to any of them. (In fewer words, all Hoover knows about it is what he reads in the papers!)

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Crazy Quilt" comes to the Alvin tonight. Billy Rose, its producer, calls it his revue of 1931. It is a triple-star skallyhoot with Fannie Brice, Phil Baker and Ted Healy as the big nameys. Try Wed. or Sat. if you like a mat.

Next week the Alv. will have that Hollywood satire, "Once In A Lifetime," which required something in excess of 400 performances to give New York a sufficiency. It has a cast of 40 persons to interpret the playwrighting of Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman. The company is the original one.

The Nixon will say "howdy" to a new season tonight when "The Social Register" will be revealed for the first time on any stage having paying customers in front of it. Lenore Ulric, supported by Sidney Blackmer, will help it to make its initial bow. Six nights and Wednesday and Saturday afternoon for this'n.

Another premiere will follow almost immediately, that is, Tuesday night, October 6, when Schwab and Mandel are to offer a new operetta, "East Wind," which has been tuned by Sig Romberg. The words and sitcheashuns are by Oscar Hammerstein II and Frank Mandel. J. Harold Murray, Charlotte Lansing and Joe Penner head the roster of hirelings.

Pittsburgher Held After Fatal Crash

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 28.—George H. Junk, 22, of 349 Isabelle street, Lock 4, died in Charleroi-Monessen Hospital, as a result of injuries received when the automobile in which he was riding was struck by a truck in Charleroi.

Thomas Lewis, 28, of 307 Jacob street, Pittsburgh, driver of the truck, was held in bond of $1,500, charged with involuntary manslaughter.

Breaks Collar Bone In Fall Into River

Falling from the Pennsylvania Railroad bridge over the Monongahela River at Try street, John Toc, 75, of Durbin street, suffered a broken collarbone early today. Toc plunged into the river a short distance from the north bank and was rescued by Baltimore and Ohio Railroad employes who heard his cries. He was removed to the Allegheny General Hospital. He told police he was walking over the bridge when he tripped and fell into the river.

Forbes, Andrews Arrive in Vancouver

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 28.—(AP)—W. Cameron Forbes, United States Ambassador to Japan, returned home for a brief vacation aboard the liner Empress of Japan.

On the same ship was Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews, head of the exploration and research department of the American Museum of Natural History, en route to New York following an archeological exploration of parts of North China and the Gobi Desert.

DR. CALDWELL'S way helps Constipated Children

OFTEN, this simple prescription brings the first natural, complete bowel action a child has had in weeks. And the entire system benefits from its gentle aid.

Feverishness, biliousness, headaches simply disappear when Syrup Pepsin is used. The bowels become regular and remain that way. Appetite becomes hearty; the digestion becomes more complete; energy and strength are restored.

Nothing you can give a bilious, half-sick, constipated child—or take yourself when your bowels need help—will do as much for you.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription for the bowels, written by a famous physician—one whose record of over 3500 birth cases without loss of one mother or baby is believed unique in American medical history.

No wonder Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is ideal for women and children. But it is equally effective for the bowels of robust men. Whether you're only occasionally constipated or chronically that way, it will cleanse, regulate your bowels, harmlessly and in a hurry. All drugstores have the big bottles.

ASK LIFE TERM FOR SON

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(INS)—A strange human drama in which a mother with breaking heart consented to permit her beloved black sheep son to be placed in danger of sentence to prison for life as a fourth offender was being enacted here today.

Mrs. Margaret Everett agreed to have her husband Frank Everett sign the complaint charging their 23-year-old son Emmett with stealing the family automobile. Upset by criminal tendencies the boy has shown since he was 15, he has served several prison sentences following conviction of grand larceny charges—the parents determined to reform their son even if under the Baumes law of New York a conviction on the fourth felony charge makes a life imprisonment sentence mandatory.

Miss Annie Everett, Emmett's aunt, said:

"Emmett should go some place where he cannot hurt himself or others. He's always been a sweet boy, the kind that helped with the dishes and was helpful around the house.

"Then these strange spells would come over him. He went car-crazy."

IOWA COW WAR ARMY CUT

TIPTON, Ia., Sept. 28.—(AP)—Iowa's "cow war" appeared to be over today.

One-fourth of the 1,500 or more members of the state militia recently sent into Cedar County to help veterinarians enforce the state law for testing cattle for tuberculosis had been ordered withdrawn after meeting with little or no resistance from farmers who objected to the tests.

The farmers opposed the tests on the grounds they were not exact in determining the presence of tuberculosis in cattle, that they were not paid enough for cattle condemned, that the tests injured the cattle and that the law itself was unconstitutional. A climax to their fight was reached last Monday when they resisted the efforts of 65 sheriff's deputies to help veterinarians enforce the law, resulting in an order for troops by Gov. Dan Turner.

LEGION ASKS HOOVER TALK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—(AP)—President Hoover was invited today by Henry L. Stevens, Jr., the new national commander of the American Legion, to address the Legion's Armistice Day meeting in Washington.

Stevens will leave Washington tonight for his home at Warsaw, N. C., where a celebration will be held tomorrow over his election to the post.

As he left the White House Stevens vigorously replied again to the charges of Dr. Clarence True Wilson of the Methodist Board of Prohibition, Temperance and Morals that the legion convention had been a "drunken orgy." He said he believed that Dr. Wilson "could have been more dignified and more truthful."

Insanity Plea Cuts Wife Slayer's Term

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 28.—Contending that he shot and mortally wounded his wife Charlotta, in their home in Brownsville on May 28 during an "angry period" due to illness, Harry N. (Dad) Drennon today was sentenced to two to five years in Western Penitentiary.

Mrs. Drennon had gone to the sick room to attend her husband. Judge Davis Henderson said he was convinced Drennon was mentally deranged when he fired the shot.

Loses Citizenship Because of Wedding

The naturalization certificate of Robert A. McConnell, 29, of McKinley avenue, Avalon, was revoked by Judge Nelson McVicar in Federal Court today. Naturalization officers informed the court that McConnell in his application had represented himself as single whereas he was married and his wife was one of his character witnesses. McConnell was told he could make application for citizenship again in two years.

DONORS TURN OVER KEYS AT DEDICATION

Chancellor Bowman Receives Gift at Exercises Held In Institution's Foyer

The keys to the new $900,000 Falk Clinic, the gift of Maurice, and his late brother, Leon Falk, to the medical center of the University of Pittsburgh were given Dr. John G. Bowman, chancellor at dedication exercises in the foyer of the new building today. The presentation was made by Maurice Falk.

Dr. Bowman presided at the program which included addresses by Maurice Falk, Dr. R. R. Huggins, dean of the University of Pittsburgh medical school; Dr. Joseph H. Barach, medical director of Falk Clinic, and others. The Rev. Dr. Carl Wallace Petty, pastor of the First Baptist Church, delivered the invocation.

A description of the new building and its manifold aims was given by Dr. Barach, who said it had been founded for the purpose of aiding in the treatment of disease, to aid the poor and to train physicians, making them better medical men and better trained doctors.

The Pitt Medical School will entertain the board of the Allegheny County Medical Association at a dinner this evening. Honor guests will include Dr. Willard J. Stone, of Pasadena, and Dr. Alfred Stengel, of Philadelphia.

Despondent Woman Attempts Suicide

Mrs. Edith Maurer, 33, of Bolivar, O., despondent, attempted to end her life by poison, police said, in Vendome Hotel at 400 Penn avenue early today. She was found by Mrs. Mary Webber, who called police. At Allegheny General Hospital, where she was taken, her condition was described as fair.

A cut on the hand suffered when she was paring potatoes caused the death today of Mrs. Mary Swearingen, 57, a widow, of 2805 Franklin street, North Side. The woman was cut on September 5, and an infection resulted. She was removed to the Allegheny General Hospital.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

WINSLOW, Ariz., Sept. 28.
To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Will Rogers

Accompanied by a couple of my kids and a nephew we are flying back to old 'Orangejuiceville' after a happy day at a big celebration in Claremore. It sure was fine to meet all the old home folks. After all it's the best people that stay at home; it's just the tramps that leave and do the humming. It broke all records for an enjoyable day. There wasn't a speech made and you just can't imagine how glad everybody was. The Chamber of Commerce and some politicians were broken hearted not to be able to say something, but we kept 'em still. Yours, WILL.

Chinese Raiders Wanted Lindy's Old Sandwich

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

International affairs have reached the chiropractic stage.

England tossed its gold standard to the wolves. Steel reduced wages after promising Mr. Hoover it wouldn't. The American Legion surrendered its dower rights to the bonus.

Mr. Gandhi is sun-bathing in London fog, demonstrating to the world just what the well-dressed man can do without.

Hungry Chinese attacked Lindy's plane. They must have been after that four-year-old sandwich.

The bright side is the discovery of another Wendel heiress. Idaho potatoes are bigger than ever. Heflin has stopped sneezing in the pepper and in huddles there is strength.

TRADE SURVEY PREPARED BY POLK & CO.

Accurate Figures Prepared For Greater Pittsburgh; Census to Be Dramatized

Accurate figures on unemployment, installment debt payments and saving bank deposits among families in Greater Pittsburgh—three important factors in any consideration of prevailing local economic conditions—will be revealed Thursday by R. L. Polk & Company, city directory publishers, who recently completed a unique house-to-house market census of the Pittsburgh trading area.

An analysis of the results of the census in which the woman head of practically every family in the area was interviewed will be presented by Emerson B. Knight, director of consumer research for the Polk Company, to members of the Retail Merchants Association and of the Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon in the William Penn Hotel. Edgar J. Kaufmann president of the merchants association, will preside.

An unusual feature of the luncheon will be a dramatization of the census by Jane-Ellen Ball, KDKA star, who appearing as "Mrs. Pittsburgh" personifying the wives, mothers and housekeepers interviewed, will discuss the buying habits, preferences and prejudices of the nearly 220,000 families represented in the Polk study.

The entire program is to be broadcast by KDKA and a number of associated stations.

In gathering the data which will be presented to the merchants, representatives of the Polk Company, early this summer, simultaneously with compilation of the annual city directory, asked 18 questions touching upon more than 90 family interests, of every woman head of a family interviewed.

Powers in Parley With Attorney

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Harry F. Powers, Clarksburg man accused of killing two women and three children, was granted permission yesterday to hold an hour's conference with his attorney, J. E. Law, of Clarksburg. The conference was held in the office of the deputy warden. Its subject was not revealed.

Powers is being held in the state penitentiary until his trial in Clarksburg because of fears for his safety in his home city.

Crafton Man Named Officer of Reserves

Francis A. Landgraff, of Crafton, has been comissioned a second lieutenant in the quartermaster corps of the Army Reserve Corps, according to word received here from Washington. William A. Nelson, of Clairton, and Foster L. Stevens, of Cheswick, have been comissioned first lieutenants in the coast artillery and James Todd, Jr., of Sewickley, a first lieutenant in the field artillery.

TRAFFIC PERIL HOUR AND DAY CHANGES

August Most Dangerous Time From 7 to 8 P. M. on Saturdays' Records Show

Proving itself as changeable as the weather, Pittsburgh's most dangerous traffic hour and day picked new times to harass the wary pedestrian and motorists.

According to the August report of traffic mishaps by the Traffic Planning Bureau, the dangerous hour was changed from 5 to 6 p. m. to 7 to 8 p. m., and the dangerous day from Sunday to Saturday.

During the month there were 95 non-fatal accidents, inflicting injuries to 83 persons. Of these 10 occurred during the hours of 7 to 8 p. m. and 24 on Saturdays. There were six fatal accidents involving pedestrians, two occurring on Saturdays. There were 120 non-fatal accidents in July and 119 a year ago.

Gun Wound Fatal To North Side Man

The death last night in Allegheny Hospital of Herman Hansel, 64, of 710 Taylor street, North Side from an allegedly self-inflicted bullet wound in the abdomen was being investigated by the Coroner's office today. Hansel was reported to have shot himself Saturday.

Padlocked Eagles To Open Under Bond

Judge Nelson McVicar, in Federal Court, today approved a $1,000 bond whereby the Eagles Lodge No. 283, Oil City, will be enabled to reopen premises padlocked April 28, for alleged violation of the dry laws.

M'KEES ROCKS THUGS TAKE CASH, GEMS

Two Armed Robbers Escape With $900 and Diamond; Victim Breaks Way Out

After robbing Samuel Bender, meat dealer of 611 Chartiers avenue, McKees Rocks, of $900 in cash and a $400 diamond pin, two armed bandits today locked him in a refrigerator from which he liberated himself after breaking four windows. Bender said one of the bandits covered him with a revolver and demanded:

"Put down your hands and give us your money."

Two sacks, one containing $28 and the other $30—change from Bender's cash registers were handed to the bandits.

Pocketing the contents, the leader, menacing Bender with a gun, said:

"Now get us the big money. We know you have it."

Bender replied:

"I deposited it Saturday."

Insisting, the bandit demanded:

"Come across or we'll tear you inside out."

Bender complied.

As the bandits started to leave the shop, one saw Bender's diamond scarf pin. He said:

"How about that diamond?"

His companion attempted to tear it off but it was fastened with a safety clasp. Grabbing a large butcher knife, he slashed Bender's tie and pocketed the jewel.

Nearing the door, one of the bandits returned and covering Bender forced him into the refrigerator.

DREW ON BENCH IN HIGH COURT

Judge James B. Drew, formerly of the Allegheny County bench and subsequently a judge of the Superior Court, today was sworn in as a justice of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

The commission was presented by Attorney E. W. Smith, a close personal friend of Judge Drew, and the oath was administered by Chief Justice Robert S. Frazer before a full bench and a crowded courtroom.

In keeping with the traditions of the Supreme Court there were no flowers. Justice Drew and his colleagues immediately began hearing appeals.

Manchester Center To Open October 1

The Manchester Educational Center, Chateau and Franklin streets, will open October 1 and close May 31, 1932. Most of the activities have been planned for one meeting a week. Educational and cultural activities have been divided to include adult, intermediate and junior groups; arrangements having been made for classes in music, art, drama and drawing. Members of the committee in charge include Mrs. F. J. Torrance, Mrs. H. F. Baker, S. E. Eliot, H. F. Baker and Dr. E. N. Clopper.

CLUB IN CLASH ON POLITICS

The first meeting of the North Hills Independent Club was held yesterday at Ehler's Grove near North Park, with numerous arguments arising among the members. The club was recently organized for the purpose of fighting machine politics and working for lower taxes. A rule which bars political office and job holders from membership was the principal cause for argument.

Although there was some opposition against the ruling, there was no change. The speakers were John Schrader, of Hampton Township; C. W. Nichols, of Franklin Township; George Born, of Ross Township; Arthur Bennett, of Richland Township, and W. W. Barr, secretary of the Union Civic Club, of Wilkinsburg.

The club has members in Ross, McCandless, Sewickley Heights, Marshall, Ohio, Richland, Pine and Hampton townships.

Believed by police to be the victim of highwaymen, Philip Adams, 30, of 713 Fifth avenue, New Kensington, was found in the street a short distance from his home early today, with a deep laceration on the back of his head. At the Citizens Hospital his condition was reported as fair.

Hostesses Plan Open House Program

Members of the board of the Jewish Home for Babies and Children will act as hostesses at the "open house" to be held Wednesday afternoon at the home, 2508 Breckenridge avenue. Mrs. A. Englander, chairman, will be in charge. A musical program will be offered.

'Hill' Eats Biscuits Such As Delight King George

As a result police are looking for "a college man from Baltimore, on his way to Akron for work." H. B. Dolan, American representative of a British baking firm, told the story to police.

Coming West through Harrisburg Saturday he met the man from Baltimore, and gave him a lift. In his automobile he carried 40 cases of samples of biscuits such as are manufactured for King George of England. Dolan planned to distribute the delicacies among exclusive clubs in Pittsburgh, where the market price of $4 a pound could be paid.

Dolan consented to let the stranger sleep in the car, parked in a downtown lot, and promised to buy his breakfast in the morning. But when he went to the parking lot yesterday, stranger and biscuits were gone.

Police investigating in the Hill district learned a man had passed through the district distributing delicious cookies—or maybe they were biscuits. Anyhow they were fit for a king.

Lutheran Head to Address Sabbath School Meeting

Dr. Walter L. Schuette, president of the eastern division of the American Lutheran Church, was to be the principal speaker at today's sessions of the forty-second annual convention of the Allegheny County Sabbath School Association.

The convention opened yesterday in Trinity Cathedral, Sixth avenue, with Henry E. Cole, president of the association, presiding. Nearly 1,000 persons attended. A feature was a performance by the County Christian Endeavor Chorus of 100 voices. The Rev. Dr. Robert M. Hopkins, of New York, was the speaker.

Other convention speakers will be the Rev. Dr. S. P. Franklin, head of the religious department, University of Pittsburgh; the Rev. Dr. Gaius J. Slosser, of the Western Theological Seminary; the Rev. Harold Humbert, Miss Lillian Reed, Miss Ione Hayes, the Rev. J. Gordon Howard, H. C. Cridland and Dr. J. Kirkwood Craig. The convention will close tomorrow.

3 METHODIST DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS TO END TERMS

6-YEAR TERMS END, CAUSING VACANCIES

By DR. CHARLES T. MURDOCK

The Rev. [illegible] Murdock [illegible] represent[illegible] Sun-Telegraph [illegible] all sessions [illegible] Pittsburgh Conference [illegible] the Methodist Episcopal Church this week [illegible] Indiana, Pa. [illegible] daily articles [illegible].

The Rev. Dr. R. B. Cuthbert, the Rev. Dr. J. S. Paxton and the Rev. Dr. N. H. Sanner, will conclude their terms as district superintendents of the Pittsburgh Conference at its coming session.

Upon the [illegible] wisdom [illegible] choosing the[illegible] will depend the prestige and progress of Methodism in this part of the state. The law of the church decrees a tenure of six years in this office.

At the expiration of that time the men thus [illegible] are once more returned to the pastorate.

The unusual event of three incumbents out of five in all leaving their posts at the same conference presents many knotty problems to the appointing powers. Resident Bishop Welch will preside at this critical time.

Dr. Cuthbert had one more year to finish his term, but the board of managers of the Methodist Home and Hospital at Mt. Lebanon drafted him to become superintendent, a vacancy caused by the death of the Rev. Dr. B. B. Wolf.

HOLMES SEES NEW RELIGION

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—[illegible]—Christianity as it has been known is passing from the world, the Rev. Dr. John Haynes Holmes told his Community Church congregation, but in its place is coming a new religious spirit.

Dr. Holmes, who returned last week from an extended tour of Europe, declared the Christian churches of that continent no longer were battling with each other for sectarian supremacy, but were driven together "in confused retreat before the onsweeping forces of triumphant atheism." He added:

"But I cannot feel disturbed. I feel a new spirit stirring in the world. I felt it in Germany, I saw it in Russia, I met it in Gandhi. This spirit says little about the old-time God and the old-time salvation, but it is moving men to sacrifice, quickening them to brotherhood, and binding them to visions of a better world, and this, if I mistake not, is religion."

Vanished Tanker Now Believed Safe

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—(AP)—Coast Guard officials today had concluded that a small unidentified tanker sighted Friday, apparently drifting off North Truro, Cape Cod, had proceeded safely on her way.

A Coast Guard surfman had reported seeing a flag in the tanker's rigging which might have been a distress signal. A few hours later the ship disappeared.

$2,000 DIAMOND STOLEN

A diamond ring, valued at $2,000, and two fur coats, valued at $400, were stolen last night from the apartment of Mrs. J. Friedman, Terrace Apartments, at Shady avenue and Douglas street. The robbery occurred during the absence of the family.

Buck Smiley, 26, and George Ferguson, 35, both Negroes of New York, captured early yesterday a short time after they were alleged to have obtained $30 in the hold-up of the St. Louis Sandwich Shop, at 2305 Fifth avenue, were being held in the Oakland Police Station today.

Charles Gust, the night manager of the restaurant, was said to have identified the two as the bandit pair. Smiley, police reported, had $28 and a revolver in his possession when arrested.

Bus Firm to Receive Awards for Safety

Having successfully passed through the Western Pennsylvania Safety Council's accident prevention campaign, which started January 1, the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company will be presented two awards Thursday evening in City Council chamber. The company won a bronze trophy for the best record in its class (firms employing 200 men or less) and a certificate for having passed through the period without an accident in which an employe was injured.

STATE SEEKING BUSINESS FEES

HARRISBURG, Sept. 28.—Collections estimated at $1,000,000 are expected to result in the drive for the registration of business firms under the fictitious name act and also foreign corporations, in the opinion of the Secretary of the Commonwealth. A drive has been inaugurated seeking to have these establishments register with the state.

A survey now in progress places the number of unregistered business establishments in Philadelphia alone at from 18,000 to 20,000. The registration fee ranges from $6 to $10.

The Secretary of the Commonwealth has expressed the belief that 100,000 firms and individuals doing business in Pennsylvania are unregistered. The Pittsburgh territory will be investigated after the drive is closed in Philadelphia, the Secretary said.

Policeman Slashed As Bottle Breaks

While replacing a five-gallon bottle in a water cooler in the Mt. Washington Police Station yesterday, Patrolman Salvatore Oliver was severely cut on the right wrist when the bottle slipped from his hands and broke against the wall. After being treated at the South Side Hospital the officer was taken home. Oliver is substituting for Patrolman George Demmel, janitor, who is on his vacation.

Rings Alarm to Test Firemen's Vigilance

James Murray, 22, of 518 Center street, East Pittsburgh, was arrested last midnight by Fire Chief Charles Stack, of East Pittsburgh, who accused Murray of sounding a false alarm from a fire alarm box at Linden avenue and Beech street. Chief Stack said Murray told him he had sounded the alarm to satisfy himself that the fire department was "on the job."

52 Russ Engineers In U. S. for Study

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(AP)—Fifty-two young Russian engineers, chosen in a competitive examination, arrived last night to study for three years in American colleges. They will go to Harvard, Cornell, Columbia, Lehigh, Wisconsin, Purdue, Colorado School of Mines, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh.

STEEL WORKERS PLAN UNION

Plans for organization of a union of steel workers were laid yesterday at a conference of more than 400 men at 2157 Center avenue. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Metal Workers Industrial League, affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League, a Communistic organization.

Officials of the organization said the steps were made in protest against the announcement of the 10 per cent wage cut for steel workers.

William Z. Foster, national secretary of the Trades Union Unity League, one of the speakers, said an effort would be made to call local strikes against wage cuts and speedups, and to demand a minimum wage of $5 a day.

Sheriff Battles Deputy Caught Running Still

BOULDER, Col., Sept. 28.—(INS)—After a running gun battle between Sheriff Robert V. Blum and one of his own deputies, the latter, Raymond Bailey, 25, of Brookfield, Col., was locked up in the county jail here.

Blum and five deputies surprised Bailey and James Marr, 38, of Denver, operating a still three miles southwest of Lafayette, Col. Bailey opened fire and surrendered only after the officers had responded with a fusillade.

Bailey, the deputy, has been active in the enforcement of the prohibition law in this district, Blum said.

League Board Fails In Armament Truce

GENEVA, Sept. 28.—(AP)—The League of Nations Disarmament Committee argued in vain today trying to reach an agreement on an armaments truce and adjourned after referring the question to a subcommittee.

Hugh Wilson, the American representative, urged the adoption of some simple declaration in which the powers would agree not to increase the existing levels of their armaments for the duration of the proposed truce. The British, Spanish and Italian delegates approved his suggestion, but Japan insisted that the decision be postponed.

BOY ASKS JURY TRIAL IN DEATH

CROWN POINT, Ind., Sept. 28.—(INS)—With the same nonchalance displayed since his arrest, Perry Swank, 15, today pleaded not guilty to a charge of murdering Eugene Duckworth, 68-year-old filling station attendant, contradicting his previous statement that he would plead guilty and take the consequences.

Perry, who asked for a jury trial, was granted a continuance until October 12. Judge Smith set that date for trial after defense counsel told him the boy had changed his mind about pleading guilty this morning.

Deputy Prosecutor John Underwood, who represented the state, told reporters he would demand the death penalty. Perry's comment was:

Seabury to Probe Court Nominations

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(AP)—Newspapers said today that Samuel Seabury, counsel to the Legislative Committee investigating New York City, would investigate a pact whereby Democrats and Republicans nominated 12 new justices for the State Supreme Court.

Under the arrangement, seven of the new justices are to be Democrats, the other five Republicans. Because all candidates have both parties' indorsements they are sure to be elected. The salary is $25,000 a year, the term 14 years.

WALKOUT ENDS IN OHIO MINES

MILLFIELD, O., Sept. 28.—(AP)—More than 1,000 coal miners trudged back to their jobs in all but two Athens County mines today, ending a week's walkout that started in a dispute over the method of selecting checkweighmen.

At a mass meeting here yesterday the miners voted to accept a plan submitted by Gov. George White under which only employes of the mines concerned can vote on the selection of checkweighmen.

Approximately 1,500 miners, their wives and children attended the meeting and stood in a drizzling rain while their leaders told them the new agreement was not satisfactory, but must be accepted for the present to escape the hardships of a winter without work.

Walker to Greet Rescued Sea Fliers

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(INS)—The three intrepid trans-Atlantic fliers—Willy Rody, Christian Johanssen and Fernado De Costa Viega, who were wrecked off Newfoundland and floated for more than six days in the ocean clinging to their ruined plane, were to be given an official welcome at city hall by Mayor Walker today. The German and Portuguese consuls-General and other notables were to attend.

Sawmill Run Crash Fatal; Three Injured When Auto Plunges Onto Railroad

Automobile accidents in the Pittsburgh district over the weekend resulted in the death of one man and injury to four other persons.

When the automobile which he was riding late Saturday night crashed into a pole on the Sawmill Run boulevard, J. C. Mundy, 50, of 220 McKinley avenue, was killed. He was pronounced dead at South Side Hospital.

Samuel Roth, 40, of 622 Franklin avenue, Aliquippa; his wife, Dora, 35, and their son, Allan, 7, were injured when a sedan in which they were riding skidded over a 40-foot embankment on the Ohio River boulevard and plunged upside down onto the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks yesterday. Roth and his son were in a serious condition in St. John's Hospital. Mrs. Roth was taken home by relatives after being treated at the hospital.

Several persons who witnessed the accident rushed down the embankment and flagged a train approaching on the same track. Roth was suffering from a probable skull fracture and his son from fractures of the nose and jaw.

Louis Schlagel, 20, of 2816 Patterson street, escaped serious injury yesterday when his automobile plunged over an unprotected 30-foot embankment after colliding with another car on Arlington avenue at Cologne street, police reported. Schlagel, suffering contusions of the body, was assisted by motorists and taken home.

Although their automobile was badly damaged when struck by a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad switch engine on a crossing at Wheeling, W. Va., Miss Emma Haggerty, of 6380 Penn avenue, and Joseph Kaplan, escaped serious injury yesterday. Miss Haggerty, driver of the car, sustained cuts and bruises and Kaplan suffered shock. Miss Haggerty said she did not notice the engine approaching.

Hazelwood Burglars Get Policeman's Gun

Thieves entered the home of Patrolman Roger H. Virts, at 204 Winston street, Hazelwood, and escaped with Patrolman Virts' revolver, three wrist watches, valued at more than $50, and $5 according to a report to police. Patrolman Virts, who reports to Center Avenue Police Station, is accompanying Inspector and Mrs. Albert Beebe on a vacation trip through the Middle West.

RAILROAD CUTS PAYROLL

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—The Lackawanna Railroad has announced a reduction of from 7½ to 10 per cent in the salaries of officers receiving more than $6,000 annually and a short-time schedule for all other employes, effective October 1.

The new working schedule calls for a two-day layoff each month without pay, which, the announcement said, was equivalent to a wage reduction of 6 2-3 per cent.

Some time ago the railroad placed certain groups of employes on a short-time basis.

Armored Bedroom Devised by Man Fearing Gunmen

BLOOMSBURG, Pa., Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Herman Shultz, of Iola, has lined the side of his bedroom nearest the road with iron plates to prevent any shots from that side from finding him as its mark.

One night last week Shultz was wakened, called to the door and a shot went past him and into the door frame. He told the Columbia County Sheriff he believed he knew who his assailant was but could not positively identify the figure who fled in a car after firing the shot.

Shultz last spring was acquitted of the killing of Floyd Brown, also of Iola.

SHIP COLLISION INJURES SIX

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Six persons received minor injuries last night in the collision of the yacht Aloha, owned by Arthur Curtiss James, former commodore of the New York Yacht Club, and the steamer Sagamore. The injured were all passengers on the Sagamore, which plies from Providence and Block Island to this port.

The Aloha, with James and a party of friends aboard, was en route to New York.

Observers said the Aloha signalled for the Sagamore to pass her stern, but that the latter returned a signal indicating the steamer was going to pass in front of the yacht.

STORE BANDITS ROB WOMAN

Four men entered the confectionery store of Mrs. Rachel Hoffman, 33, at 1714 Wylie avenue, and, after threatening to kill her if she made any outcry, escaped with $35.

As the men entered an automobile and drove away, Mrs. Hoffman ran from the store and obtained the license number of the car. She reported it to police, who found that the car was owned by an auto rental agency.

Patrolman Theodore Feldman arrested two men when they drove up to the agency in a car bearing the license number taken by Mrs. Hoffman. They are William Kalmick, 26, of 2554 Center avenue, and Joseph Hoffman, 24, of 1807 Bates street, held on suspicious person charges.

At Center Avenue Police Station, Mrs. Hoffman said Kalmick resembled one of the men, but was unable to positively identify him or his companion. Both denied connection with the robbery.

Shoe Thief Needs 350 One-legged Customers

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—To dispose of his stolen goods, the thief who looted the automobile of Charles Weiss last night may have to find 350 one-legged men, women and children.

Erie Man Kills Girl During Gun Play

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Agnes Truszkowski, 20, was shot and killed here by Joseph Ignasiak.

"I'm a Sheriff."

BOOTLEG BRIBE TALE HELD PLOT

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—The federal government's investigation of a story that two alleged gangsters paid $75,000 to escape prison sentences for income tax violations apparently has settled on the theory that it was a plot to discredit District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson.

Johnson has directed successful income tax prosecutions against several gangsters and the cases against others, including "Scarface Al" Capone, are pending. Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, said by a friend to have paid the bribe, have pleaded guilty.

Former Metropolitan Opera Singer Dies

PURDYS, N. Y., Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Domenico Russo, 52, former Metropolitan Opera singer and vaudeville performer, died here after a prolonged illness. He was a native of San Francisco.

DOUG WILL FLY TO S. AMERICA

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Douglas Fairbanks, film star, announced yesterday he planned to visit South America by airplane, leaving Los Angeles in December. Victor Fleming, motion picture director, and Charles Lewis, film actor, will accompany him.

From Los Angeles the party will follow the regular air lanes to Santiago, Chile. Crossing the Andes, it will turn north along the Atlantic coast to the mouth of the Amazon River. If possible the river will be traversed to its source.

Fairbanks said his wife, Mary Pickford, actress, might join him at some South American city, but indicated that she will not accompany him because she "dislikes to fly."

If her brother, Jack Pickford, actor, recovers rapidly from an illness, Fairbanks and Miss Pickford will make a short visit to Europe before his South American trip.

RIGHT OIL
a better gas!

YOU can't get more power out of a gasoline or motor fuel than there is in it.

That's why the right oil--Amoco Motor Oil--will make any gas a better gas.

No matter whether you use Amoco-Gas or Orange American Gas--fill your crankcase with Amoco Motor Oil (100% Paraffine Base).

Amoco Motor Oil is wax-free, has a low cold test, better heat-resisting qualities. And all of that means less sludge and carbon formation under any operating conditions!

Call for Amoco Motor Oil every time--whether it's a quart you need or a complete crankcase change.

By JAMES J. LONG

Will Grove Lose Pair? • Baseball Records Fall.
History Against Cards. Miss Hicks' Victory.
Meine in Triple Tie. Local Grid Showings.

NONE BEATS BOB TWICE IN '30 OR '31

THE GREAT SIZE of the contract confronting the Cardinals in their attempt to wrest from the Athletics the world baseball championship which the men of Mack have held since 1929 is made clear from one of the pitching angles. This has to do with the part that Bob Grove will play in the title stakes. To win the series the National League representatives may have to defeat Grove twice and the tough nature of that job may be judged from the fact that it will require the Redbirds to accomplish within the narrow span of seven games something that no club has been able to do in an entire season the last two years.

Bob Grove

Not since 1929 has the great Mackian southpaw lost two games to any one club during the whole course of a pennant race. In that year the Browns and the White Sox each won a pair of decisions over him, but since then no club has beaten him more than once in a campaign. So the Cards will have to do in seven games what no other team has been able to achieve in 22; they must accomplish in 10 days what no other outfit has been able to do in six months.

IN 1930 LEFTY was charged with only five defeats and they were scattered among as many different clubs, the Senators, Tigers, Indians, Browns and White Sox each taking him once. This year he lost only four games and again none of the clubs beating him was able to repeat, the four decisions being divided among the Senators, Browns, White Sox and Yankees.

Grove's 1930-31 record of 58 victories against only nine defeats shows that he won all of his 11 games against the Red Sox, 11 out of 12 from the Tigers, nine out of 10 from the Indians, eight out of 10 each from the Senators, Browns and White Sox, and four out of five from the Yankees. They've all looked alike to the mighty left-hander.

A COUPLE of home runs on the last day broke Heinie Meine's string of seven straight victories and kept him from winning his twentieth decision and leading the National League in a year that saw the Pirates finish below the .500 mark for the first time since 1917.

But at least Meine figured in a three-cornered tie for the leadership with Jim Elliott and Bill Hallahan, each winning 19 games. No National League pitcher reached the 20 mark. In Grove, Earnshaw and Walberg the A's alone this year had as many 20-game winners as the entire senior league has had in the last three seasons combined.

SOME HIGH SPOTS as the baseball curtain fell: Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig finished in a tie for major league home run honors at 46. The A's set a new American League record of 313 for total victories in three consecutive seasons. Joe Wood's 1912 modern pitching percentage record of .872 was broken by Lefty Grove with .886. For only the third time, both pennant winners captured more than 100 games. Lloyd Waner led both leagues in base hits with 214, against 213 for Bill Terry and 211 for Lou Gehrig. Gehrig set a new American League record of 182 for runs batted in. The Cardinals won 38 out of 44 games from the Reds in two seasons, and 33 of the last 35. The Reds set a new record of 195 double plays. Earl Webb established a record of 67 two-baggers. Ben Chapman, with 61, became the first player in 15 years to steal more than 60 bases in a season and Tommy Thevenow set a new low for bases stolen by a regular player with only one steal in 277 games in two consecutive seasons.

Helen Hicks

THOUGH MISS HELEN HICKS, only 20, is one of the youngest players ever to win the women's golf championship of the United States, no climb to the title has been more convincing than that of the Hewlett (L. I.) girl.

Before she wrested the national crown from Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, who had won it three years in succession and five times since 1922, Miss Hicks made a sweep of the eastern, Metropolitan, New York State and North Jersey championships. Evidence of rare class all the way.

AND THEN HER victory for the United States title was really a double or international one, as in a semi-final round just before meeting Mrs. Vare she conquered Miss Enid Wilson, champion of Great Britain.

So it was no fluky or chance victory that put Miss Hicks on the throne, but the triumph of a real champion. In her fourth national tournament she established herself among the greatest women players in history.

SOMETIMES THERE IS glory in defeat, and the losing fight put up by the Duquesne University football team against West Virginia at Morgantown Saturday was an instance. The Mountaineers on paper had looked far stronger than the Dukes and certain to defeat them in decisive style, and in holding Greasy Neale's potentially powerful outfit to a 14-to-6 score the green team from the Bluff made a most creditable showing, of which their followers may justly feel proud. It promises much for the new Duke eleven as it progresses in development. Evidently Elmer Layden is doing another fine job this year.

EARLY FOOTBALL SCORES prove nothing, and Carnegie Tech's failure to make more than 25 points against Buffalo may mean only that the Plaid coaches were holding the players within judicious bounds.

The loss of Henry Dreshar through a hip injury, and of Croft, Burzio and Reuter through scholastic deficiencies is a blow to the team for the time being, but it is in such situations that Carnegie spirit always shows to advantage, and no doubt it will keep the Tartans advancing steadily this fall in spite of early handicaps.

WHILE PITT HAD an easy time rubbing up a big score on Miami Saturday, the exhibition was not of a sort to give the impression that there is an undefeated season in store for the Panthers. Pitt was guilty of poor play as often as it did brilliant work and had the opposing team been one able to take advantage of the breaks Sutherland's crew might have been badly off on several occasions.

There was one really pleasing feature, however, and that was the brilliant interference given to Reider and Heller in the first quarter. On the few straight power plays that Hogan was using the linemen came out so nicely to mow down the red-jerseyed opponents that Reider and Heller had little to do except

Jim MacMurdo

PARTICULARLY PLEASING WAS the work of MacMurdo and Collins, who swung around as fast as the ball carrier and opened lanes through which any tyro could have run. This was not true of Heller's 88-yard gallop, however, as after his interference had taken him about 30 yards he had to depend on his own elusiveness to shake loose three would-be tacklers. Dougherty was another player who featured. His backing up of the line was excellent, and the way he cut down the safety men on several occasions should have caused even the undemonstrative Sutherland to smile. But with Iowa to be faced in Iowa City the coming Saturday, there will be plenty of work for the Pitt coach. There was entirely too much fumbling, as well as too much loss of yardage from penalties, to say nothing of the unusual laxity shown in the missing of nine out of 10 tries for point after touchdown. All this must be corrected before the Panther can be rated fit for a major opponent.

TECH MENTOR IDOLIZED BY PLAYERS

By Howard Harpster

All America Quarterback of Carnegie Tech in 1928. Now Geneva College Coach.

To the lawyers and attaches of Chicago's courts he is known as the Hon. Walter P. Steffen, judge of the Civil Court of Cook County, but to his host of Pittsburgh friends, the students of Carnegie Tech and his football boys he is simply and affectionately known as Wally.

Howard Harpster

With the possible single exception of the president of the college, Dr. Thomas S. Baker, Wally Steffen without question is the most popular person connected with Carnegie Tech. The entire faculty has the highest regard for him, the students idolize him and he is loved by every Carnegie Tech man who has had the privilege of playing under his coaching.

In the eyes of the fans he is the jovial successful Tartan mentor who runs on the field with his team just before the start of each game and follows the players up and down the field as they go through their plays, shouting at them and encouraging them as he finishes putting them on edge for the struggle which is to follow. He is the man who sits in the middle of the Carnegie bench during the game, appearing somewhat nervous at times and occasionally jumping up during a tense moment of play or following a bad break for his boys, only to slowly turn and take his place again.

HAS SUCCESSFUL SYSTEM

Following a score by his team he always can be seen taking a drink of water from one of the nearby buckets. The fans invariably see him between halves or at the end of the game dressed in the Carnegie mackinaw and wearing a derby hat, either slowly or quickly walking off the field, depending upon the outcome, with his arm around the waist or shoulder of one of his players.

The Carnegie Tech coaching system has been the topic of much comment throughout the country due to the fact that Steffen is with the team only during the training camp period in September, following which he travels back and forth from Chicago each week-end in order to be with the team for its games. During Wally's absence the team is in charge of Bob Waddell and Dr. W. I. Marks.

Each week before he goes back to Chicago Steffen goes over the program for the coming game with Waddell and Dr. Marks and then while Wally is away, the necessary changes are made under the watchful eyes of these two other coaches.

INSPIRES PLAYERS

I remember very clearly how we players would work as hard and conscientiously as we could for Bob and Doc in order to look good when Wally came on for the game and thereby please him. Friday nights and Saturday mornings Wally would look over what we had done, make any additions or substitutions in the plays that he deemed advisable, and then, just before the game, would "set" the team with one of his talks so familiar to Carnegie men.

There is no doubt that Steffen's ability to arouse the emotions of his players and to set them mentally for the battle has won more than one important "big game."

Carnegie's victories over Notre Dame in 1926 and 1928 can be attributed directly to Steffen's before-game talk, during which he had not only one or two but the entire 11 players aroused to such a peak that they were crying like 2-year-olds.

The Carnegie Tech team plays harder because Wally is sitting on the bench watching than for any other reason and there have been very few occasions when one of Steffen's teams has given up

The fashion in boxing changes in Pittsburgh tonight when the mitt tossers move their activities indoors for the reopening of Motor Square Garden.

A topnotch windup offering will usher in the season, Tony Herrera, Mexican lightweight contender fighting out of Chicago, meeting Joey Goodman, of Cleveland, in the 10-round main bout. It is a "natural" which the local promoters have been trying to make for more than a year, both men having won local followings through their impressive showings against good opponents here.

Goodman toyed with Ray Kiser, of Tulsa, Okla., stablemate of Herrera, in his last local appearance at Hickey Park, Millvale, early in the outdoor season, while Herrera dropped a close fight to Johnny Jadick, of Philadelphia, in his most recent effort here in the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, his only defeat by a decision here since he began campaigning in these parts several years ago. He Ray Alvis, manager of Tony Herrera, the Mexican lightweight, of Chicago, who boxes Joey Goodman, of Cleveland, in the opening windup of the season at Motor Square Garden tonight, wrote before leaving Chicago for Pittsburgh, "You will not know Herrera when you see him fight Goodman." . . . Wonder if he's going to ring in Primo Carnera on us? . . . Or if he is going to take the plaster off the bridge of Tony's nose and hang it on the tip? . . . Or if he merely means that his Tony will be that different following his long rest in California?

Stan Williamson, the football captain at Southern California this fall, is from Pittsburg—Cal. . . . When they parted at the end of the season, Larry French and Ed Phillips, battery mates on the Pirates team, headed for widely separated points, French going to California and Phillips to Worcester, Mass. . . . Even in Larry's wildest moments on the mound they never were that far apart.

Junita Alaquibel, of Spain, a protege of Paulino Uzcudun, boxed in New York the other night, and the announcer got around his name by introducing him as "Oh You Little Cue Ball." . . . The Bellefonte Academy football squad this fall is being coached by William Gutterson, who quarterbacked on the University of Nevada eleven and also played for Brick Muller's All-Star California team. . . . Gene Tunney still is a canny gent. . . . He waited until he got safely back in the U. S. before writing what he thinks about Russia.

One has to go away from home to appreciate the fine football facilities offered the local fans and scribes at the Stadium and Forbes Field. . . . For instance, at Buffalo last Saturday, Carnegie Tech played the University of Buffalo on a field enclosed by an old wooden fence and containing weather-beaten wooden stands and bleacher seats that would accommodate not more than 6,000 persons, and the press box consisted of a couple of tables along the sidelines that endangered the life and limbs of every player forced to run out of bounds. . . . Meanwhile, a large modern stadium was housing three high school football teams for a single admission price and far outdrawing the college game. . . . No band was on hand to enliven the proceedings and there was no student demonstration at the college event, and, on the whole, with its poor surroundings, the contest was a rather drab affair reminiscent of the early days of the sport.

TUNNEY DENIES HE'LL RETURN

STAMFORD, Conn., Sept. 28.—"I am not going to return to the ring," Gene Tunney said emphatically in an exclusive interview granted today to the International News Service. "I seem to be the only person in the country not in doubt as to my re-entry into the boxing game."

Tunney was sitting in the flowered-bordered garden of his little colonial home outside of Stamford. He was playing with an excited police dog and his statement which ended reports as to his comeback was made casually but in a tone which left no room for doubt. Gene Tunney is through with the ring. There can be no question about that.

"Let me repeat, I have retired for good, and nothing would induce me to come back," Gene said.

PIRATES WIND UP SEASON

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

A little Pirate band was back in Pittsburgh today after winding up the season yesterday in Chicago with a pair of defeats. Some of the Buccos already are headed for their homes, and the majority of the others will be on their way soon.

Manager Jewel Ens and Capt. Pie Traynor are among those who will remain here for the present. Ens expects to see the World Series games played in his home city, St. Louis, but Traynor does not expect to witness these titular games.

It was in keeping with an off season that the Freebooters rang down the curtain in defeat. If you look back into April you may recall that the Buccos jumped off in Chicago with a setback and they ended up in the same town in defeat. They were twice trimmed yesterday, the scores being 3 to 1 and 8 to 4.

A note of regret was sounded by the Buccos as they returned as a result of the reverse experienced by Heinie Meine in the first game of a doubleheader with the Bruins. The Crown Prince of Luxemburg made a determined effort to be the only pitcher in the National League to cop 20 games, but this pleasure was denied Heinie, although he made a valiant fight against Charley Root and the Cubs. Meine allowed only nine hits, but two of these were homers by Charley Grimm and Danny Taylor.

All may be quiet on the local baseball front until after the World Series is over. But within the next two weeks there may be a new managerial appointment announced by the Pittsburgh office. That George Gibson will succeed Ens appears to be the logical conclusion now, but there seems to be certain things that have not been ironed out satisfactorily.

WAYNESBURG, ST. MARY'S TOP FAVORITES

By JESS CARVER

Messrs. Frank Wolf and Slip Madigan, football coaches respectively at Waynesburg College and St. Mary's of Oakland, Cal., today are sitting back with smiles of general satisfaction adorning their classic countenances, and deservedly so. It remained for their elevens, Wolf's Yellow Jackets and Madigan's Saints, to record the first major upsets of the 1931 collegiate gridiron season on Saturday, the Jackets by trimming Penn State 7-0, and the Saints by humbling the proud Trojans of Southern California 13-7.

PITT IMPRESSIVE

The dispositions of the Pop Warners, Wally Steffens, Greasy Neales, Bill Ingrams, Bob Higginses, Howard Joneses, Wallace Wades, Dutch Bergmans and Curley Byrds are a bit curdled right now, for their teams either lost, were tied or won by very unsatisfactory scores.

Pitt turned on the power against Miami University, of Ohio, sinking the Buckeye Staters under a 61-0 score, expending but little effort. Bulldog Reider ran the opening kickoff back for a touchdown, 95 yards, and from then on, the Panthers held the situation in complete control. The game was just a breeze for Pitt.

Carnegie Tech looked far from impressive or hopeful against Buffalo, a team it walloped 74-2 last year. Judge Steffen and Bob Waddell had trouble with the quarterbacks, the boys failing to carry out instructions. Bevivino, who transferred from Notre Dame, looked pretty sweet at times, and may wind up with the regular quarterback job for his own. The Tech line, weakened by the eleventh-hour ineligibility of Croft and Bunny Burzio, performed well enough on the defense, but lacked drive and class on the attack.

THIEL COLLEGE SPORTS FORMIDABLE ELEVEN

COACH BENSON INSTALLS NEW SYSTEM

(This is the fifteenth of an annual series of special articles written by Jess Carver, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph football writer, dealing with the prospects of tri-state district college elevens. The article on Bethany will appear in tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph.)

If the spirit exhibited by the squad during the pre-season training period and the fight and class it exhibited in holding the strong Fordham eleven in check for three periods of Saturday's opening game in New York can be taken as an indication, Thiel College is going to sport a right formidable gridiron varsity this fall.

A year ago, the Lutherans won three and lost six games, bowing to Temple, Carnegie Tech, Geneva, Allegheny, Wash-Jeff and Grove City, while winning over St. Vincent, Bethany and Westminster. The team started well, holding the strong Temple Owls to a 13-6 score, by a battering at the hands of Carnegie Tech put the team in such shape that it was unable to come back against Geneva and Allegheny, losing both these frays.

USES ZUPPKE SYSTEM

A new coach and a new system are in being at Greenville this year, Charley Benson, from Illinois, having succeeded Tink Rowley. Benson is using Zuppke's system, and mixed in a double wing back style of play with which he expects to obtain results.

Nine lettermen were lost by graduation, chief among them being the veteran Frank Leonard, a guard; Mike Kurtz, a star end; Bill Myers, a hard-hitting fullbacker and Bob Knopp, who played a guard and tackle under Rowley.

This year's team will be comparatively young, although it will be possible for Benson to start a lineup of 10 lettermen. His line looks to be a potentially strong weapon. It remains to develop a backfield and to construct a potent defense.

Benson is experimenting with a trio of wingmen. The veterans, Garthwaite and Pauley, the latter having changed his name to Pauley from Paluselli, will get the first call, with Mike Schemick, who also may find employment as a halfback, serving as the first string understudy. Pierce, Strimer, Edwards and Berkman are the other terminal candidates.

VETERANS SHINE

Two more veterans, Franks and Abrams, figure to hold the first string tackle positions. George, an up and coming freshman, and Papusa, a letterman, offer strong reserve support. Franks has been rated in the past as one of the best linemen in the Class B sector.

Holl and Steiser, a set of lettermen, and two freshmen, Gazetos and Dudley, will care for the guard positions. Holl and Steiser are fast enough to offset their lack of great weight. Gazetos is giving both the lettermen a honest-to-goodness scrap for starting honors.

Capt. Bill Frampton, a steady and dependable center, will be over the ball until he's carried out. There isn't a man on the squad capable of filling his shoes. He is an alert and canny defense man, able to meet any emergency. His passing always has been steady and accurate.

WARDLE-M'CLURE ALTERNATE

Laban Wardle, the veteran, and diminutive back, and McClure, a letter winner last year, will alternate at quarterback. Wardle is a fine kicker and passer, considering that he is no bigger than a half-pint. McClure has shown unexpected form to date.

Bill Lowther, who was Bill Petrini last year, and young Ed Snyder, a freshman from Aspinwall, are to be paired at the halfbacks, provided Schemick isn't brought into the backfield from end. Snyder has shown excellent ball-toting ability and will make a fine running mate for the elusive Lowther. Both men can pass and receive passes.

Dale Clark, of Monaca, and a hefty frosh, Steve Temechko, are leading candidates for the fullback job, with Clark out in front due to his edge in experience. Clark also is a dependable kicker. Clark went well last year as a freshman.

The schedule is none too soft. Fordham was met last Saturday, and this week the Lutherans must meet the rugged St. Bonaventure eleven at Olean. Next week, in a night game at Beaver Falls, they'll take on Geneva and will then clash with Allegheny, Bethany, St. Vincent, Westminster, Niagara and Grove City in a row.—JESS CARVER.

LITTLE SERIES UMPS NAMED

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Charles H. Knapp, president of the International League, has named W. J. (Barry) McCormick and W. Jack Carroll as umpires for the Little World Series between Rochester, of the International League, and St. Paul, of the American Association. Thomas J. Hickey, president of the American Association, has selected George H. Johnson and R. W. Snyder, for umpire duty.

The series, a best five-out-of-nine competition, opens Wednesday in St. Paul. Games will be played there on Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday. Then the teams will move to Rochester where the series will be completed.

Grid Material Secondary To These Winning Coaches

Foxy Miller, Turtle Creek Union High Mentor.

By JULIUS LEVIN

Six Western Pennsylvania scholastic coaches who have an undeniable right to refute the old sport axiom that "football players make a coach" are Leroy P. (Hank) Day, at Washington; Foxy Miller, at Turtle Creek Union; Johnny Reed, at Scott High, North Braddock; Earl Loucks, at Greensburg; Elmer Carroll, at Wilkinsburg, and Phil Bridenbaugh, at New Castle.

Year in and year out despite heavy inroads made in their athletic ranks by graduations, these six schools always can be found in the thick of the running for the championship of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League. When any one of the six loses a contest, it is usually recorded as an upset.

DEMAND INTELLIGENCE

While rival coaches are willing to accept any and all candidates at the start of practice, the six mentors mentioned above always have made it a point that to play on one of their teams, whether it be in football or basketball, the individual must possess all of the requisites of an ideal athlete.

Candidates for football teams at New Castle, Wilkinsburg, Greensburg, Scott, Turtle Creek and Washington invariably are well drilled in the fundamentals of the game, an important factor in the sport that other mentors often pass up. As a result, these standardbearers of Western Pennsylvania scholastic sports play smart football even in defeat.

If a player possesses an ounce of football intelligence, it will be developed to its fullest extent by these coaches.

DAY BIG SUCCESS

Washington, the home of the Little Presidents for years, has basked in the spotlight of football under the reign of Coach Day. Any championship race without a contender wearing the Blue and Black of Washington is a strange sight.

Turtle Creek Union owes much of its football prestige to Foxy Miller, former University of Pittsburgh star. Miller has been turning out championship contenders at Turtle Creek ever since he took over the reins there, more than a decade back. The number of college players he has produced would form several varsity squads.

Phil Bridenbaugh, former Geneva College mentor, has accomplished wonders at New Castle High School and it is due largely to his untiring efforts that the Lawrence Countians rank with the greatest in the district in turning out winning teams. It was Bridenbaugh who instituted night football at New Castle, a move that revolutionized the sport in that section. Friday night battles in New Castle, regardless of the attractions offered, draw immense crowds. He, like Foxy Miller and Hank Day, has turned out fine timber for college elevens.

CARROLL GREAT COACH

Wilkinsburg, after an era of prosperity in all branches of sport, was in the throes of an athletic depression when it was decided to draft Elmer Carroll, one of the greatest ends in the history of Western Pennsylvania football at Wash.-Jeff., from Greensburg. Carroll was enjoying unusual success at the Westmoreland County school and he has lost none of his cunning since coming to Wilkinsburg.

To replace Carroll as coach, Greensburg grabbed another former Wash-Jeff graduate in Earl Loucks. Loucks took up where Carroll left off, and judging from results obtained, Greensburg does not miss Carroll. Greensburg invariably is represented by powerful teams and this year's eleven is no exception. College scouts find this school one of the best in the district for material. Its graduates may be found starring for colleges throughout the East.

REED LEADS CHAMPS

Johnny Reed, one of the greatest basketball stars in the history of Penn State College, has been coming to the fore rapidly as coach at Scott High, North Braddock, both in basketball and football. His basketball team won the state championship last winter and, judging from the showing of his football team so far, it promises to play a big part in the title race. Reed first gained recognition as a coach when he brought an untried and green Braddock eleven to Turtle Creek to hand Foxy Miller's eleven an unexpected setback and ruin its chances for the W. P. I. A. L. crown seven years ago.

Yes, football players may make a coach, but the six coaches mentioned above have proved beyond a doubt that it not always is necessary to have the best of material to turn out a winning team.

Close Scores Mark Local Soccer Games

Inclement weather failed to keep the district soccerites idle yesterday and a number of interesting games were staged.

Sturgeon defeated Primrose, 3-2; Sout View defeated Cedar Grove, 3-2; Gladden swamped Cuddy, 6-2; Heidelberg blanked Grove City, 4-0; Curry Juniors and Shannon Owls battle to a 2-2 deadlock; Coverdale nosed out the F. W. Scotts, 2-1; Fitz-Henry defeated Dunlevy, 2-0; Manown defeated Hill Crest, 4-2, and Alla Hollow defeated Vestaburg, 2-1.

FRIAR BACON WINS

MAJOR LEAGUE RECORDS ARE BROKEN

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Last-day highlights and season records established in the major league races which closed yesterday were as follows:

The Phils clinched sixth place in the National League by defeating the Braves, 5-3, in the first game of a doubleheader.

The Browns annexed fifth place in the American League by beating the White Sox twice, 10-8 and 2-1, and the Red Sox eased into sixth place by beating the Nats, 4-2, while the Tigers were losing to Cleveland, 8-5.

Lou Gehrig, of the Yankees, set a new record for runs, batted in with 182.

WEBB SETS RECORD

Earl Webb, of the Red Sox, broke the major league record for two-base hits in one season with 67.

Bob Grove, Athletic's pitcher finished the season with 31 victories and four defeats for an average of .886, the highest percentage achieved by any pitcher since 1900.

Al Simmons won the American League batting championship, and the National League batting race ended in a triple tie among Chick Hafey and Jim Bottomley, of the Cardinals, and Bill Terry, of the Giants. Unofficial averages give Hafey the lead with .3489, as compared to .3486 for Terry and .3482 for Bottomley.

RUTH, GEHRIG TIE

Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig shared the home run king role by hitting 46 each. It was the tenth season in which Babe has hit 40 or more homers.

Gehrig completed the sixth consecutive season in which he has played in every game on the Yankees' league schedule.

Lloyd Waner, Pirate outfielder, led both major leagues in the matter of total hits for the season. Lloyd had 214 safe swats, Bill Terry, 213, and Lou Gehrig, 211.

The final standing of the major league leaders follows:

Taylor's single gave the Cubs a run in the first and Dan hit a homer in the third. Grimm's homer was an event of the fifth.

Glenn Spencer and Guy Bush mixed in the second game. The Cubs scored in the second round, but the Buccos jumped to the front in the third by scoring three times.

Spencer was scored on once in the fourth, his mates getting the tally back in the seventh. Glenn carried his two-run lead into the seventh, but he was shelled off the mound in this round, the Cubs staging a six-run rally.

VINES RETAINS PACIFIC TITLE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Ellsworth Vines, University of Southern California sophomore, made an impressive comeback here yesterday to defeat Frederick Perry, English Davis Cup player, and retained his Pacific Southwest tennis title, by scores of 8-10, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5, 6-2.

SCHAAF IN HOSPITAL

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—(INS.)—Ernie Schaaf, Boston contender for the heavyweight boxing championship, was a patient in St. Elizabeth's Hospital today with septic poisoning in his left forearm. Schaaf received the infection while training in Chicago for his recent bout with Tuffy Griffiths. He neglected to consult a physician until the pain became intense.

GERMAN SKATERS OUT

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Because of the economic depression, the German Hockey Association has decided not to participate in the winter Olympiad at Lake Placid, N. Y., next year.

ALTROCK SEES SHORT SERIES

By NICK ALTROCK

Baseball's Funny Man.

I predict the Cards vs. the Athletics will be a short series because the experts will have to get back to work and start guessing wrong on the football season. Five games should be enough for the series, but, inasmuch as we will have to lay over one Sunday in Philadelphia, it will seem like a month, anyway.

Nick Altrock

In my last absorbing dispatch, I said the A's were great money players. Through a trifling bookkeeping error, I overlooked Frankie Frisch of the Cards. He is the kind of money player that would bust a ligament playing second base if the series winners got only derby hats.

In the last 10 years, there has hardly been a World Series when Frisch hasn't been in the lineup. If a season finishes without Frankie copping some extra series money, he doesn't know whether to take the poor debtor's oath or have a nervous breakdown.

FRISCH MONEY PLAYER

So when I favored the A's because they all are great money players, I made a typographical error. Just one guy like Frisch offsets a whole opposing lineup of mazuma hounds. And Frankie should worry when his baseball playing days are over. He still will have a pawnbroker's mind.

The Cards' pitching staff also will be a little stronger this series because Flint Rhem has promised not to let himself get kidnaped again. If Flint should disappear again for a couple of days he will show up and claim he was doing jury duty.

But I still stick by my heavy artillery and claim the A's top the Cards in flingers all the way down the line. If Lefty Grove and Bob Earnshaw are a pair of aces, then the rest of Connie Mack's pitching staff still looks like the upper half of a pinochle deck. If the Cards expect to beat that layout they will have to play backgammon.

EDGE FOR CONNIE

Of course, for managerial brains you slip the loving cup to the A's, too. Connie Mack has been on the bench fanning himself with a scoreboard since the Civil War was patched up. If anything gets by Connie it will have to be in an armored truck.

At the same time, I've got a lot of respect for Gabby Street. Gabby has been famous since 20 years ago, when he caught a baseball thrown from the top of Washington Monument. He didn't know it at the time, but that was ideal practice for becoming manager of the Cards. I'll tell you why.

A guy that isn't afraid of baseballs plopping at his dome from a height of 550 feet ain't to be intimidated by pop bottles when the highest seat in the St. Louis bleachers is only 91 feet.

World Series Umpires are Named

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—John A. Heydler, president of the National League, has named William J. Klem and Albert (Dolly) Stark to serve as umpires for the World Series.

Heydler also announced the appointment of Ernest Quigley and George Magerkurth to serve as umpires for the Chicago city series between the Cubs and the White Sox.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—President William Harridge, of the American League, has named Richard F. Nallin and William A. McGowan as the American League umpires for the World Series.

He also selected Clarence B. Owens and George Hildebrand for the Chicago city series.

I remember distinctly the last few minutes of our game with New York University, which was played in 1927 at the Yankee Stadium in New York. With only five minutes remaining we were hopelessly beaten by the score of 20 to 0. Our team realized that there was no chance to overtake the big lead, but each of our players vowed that he would play harder than ever the last few minutes just for Wally.

The result was that our team, even though it was battered and bruised and had many of its regulars missing, marched 65 yards in the last few minutes to score a touchdown and make the final score 20 to 7. The boys were proving to Wally that they wouldn't quit, and I believe he appreciated that little incident more than any victory we could have won.

FEARLESS IN OPINION

I was very much amused a few years ago to read some of the fan letters which appeared in the Pittsburgh newspapers denouncing Steffen as unsportsmanlike, cowardly and full of sour grapes. I say I was amused because my four years of contact with Wally had proved to me that he is one of the most honest and sincerely sportsmanlike persons I know and because those letters were directed at a man who had just polled the most popular vote any Chicago judge ever had received because of his fairness, honest decisions and fearless sentences.

The reason for the attack upon Steffen was that, when he was asked to tell which of two nationally known teams he believed would win if they were to play each other his reply was not to the liking of some of the fans. Oddly enough, the two teams met the following year, and Steffen's choice won so easily that many of the fans had a change of heart and decided that perhaps Wally wasn't as far wrong as they had imagined in his opinion of the year before.

ERATH BEGINS TITLE DEFENSE

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

The battle for the caddiemasters' and assistant professionals' golf championship was under way this morning at the Longue Vue Club, a small field competing for the title won last year by the president of the organization, Paul E. (Toots) Erath of the Edgewood Country Club.

The schedule called for 36 holes today and another 36 holes tomorrow, making the medal play test over the 72-hole route.

The final for the championship of the Hotel, Club and Restaurant Men's Golf Association was scheduled for the Wildwood Country Club this afternoon, when the last round of the 36-hole divided tourney is to be played.

At the first 18-hole round played at Shannopin, Cliff Brahm and Walter Hutcheson, Mennigke tied for top prize in the first flight. John Ertl won in the second. Low gross was copped by Otto J. Eberle. The presidents' and vice president's trophies are at stake in the competition.

CHAMPS CROWNED

Four club championships were decided yesterday, when golf play was cut to a minimum due to the ushering in of the cold winds and rain—the first real fall weather linksmen have encountered.

James W. Crookston, former state and district champion, won the title at the Stanton Heights Golf Club by defeating the veteran Fred B. Weppner, 3 and 1, and Dr. W. L. Thunhurst copped the gonfalon at Edgewood by tripping E. A. Eisenbeis, 3 and 2. Both matches were at 36 holes, and at Edgewood Eisenbeis held a 3-up lead at the end of the first 18.

Joe Royston, Jr., annexed the Highland Country Club crown won last year by Jim Ramsay, by defeating Samuel M. Parks, Jr., 3 and 2, in another 36-hole affair, while Greer McIlvain, former state amateur titlist, tripped Wilson F. Marks, 2 and 1, in their 18-hole finale at Oakmont.

The championship at Hill Crest will be completed Sunday. Yesterday W. H. Morgan advanced to the final by defeating W. C. Walley, 3 and 2 at 36 holes, and will play the winner of the Dr. C. E. Bruno-R. T. Mahler match. Dr. Bruno was 2 up at the end of the first 18 holes yesterday, the match will be resumed one day this week.

BEAVER FALLS, Sept. 28.—The most important home game of the season for the Geneva College gridders occurs Saturday afternoon here when the Harpster men act as hosts to Carl Snavely's Bucknell Bisons. The game was originally scheduled for night, but at the request of Bison officials Graduate Manager Edgecombe of the Beaver Falls school shifted the fray to the afternoon.

FIREMEN BOW TO WEST VIEW GRIDDERS

By TOM BIRKS

In spite of inclement weather, the senior and lightweight independent football conferences got away to good starts yesterday, banner crowds watching all of the games. It appears a successful season is ahead.

The McKeesport Olympics and East Liverpool battled to a scoreless tie game in the senior loop, and West View lived up to the predictions of its followers by beating the East Pittsburgh Firemen, 19 to 0.

In the lightweight loop, Oakland Community won a torrid battle from the J. J. Veronas, 6 to 0. Sonny Boys traveled to Allison Park to win 15-0, and the Broadway Mounts and East Liberty Papales battled to a scoreless tie at the Greentree grounds.

The Rox Rangers gave the impression they are headed on another good season by beating Pleasant Valley, 16 to 0.

WEST VIEW'S PLAY GOOD

The Oakmonter Panthers and Whitaker tied, 6-6; Highland beat Export, 6-0, and North Side Traders topped Westinghouse, 6-0, in Division 3, and Krieger-Marx tripped the Twenty-third Warders, 13-0, and Bloomfield Civics beat Soho Oakleafs, 26-0, in Division 4.

The work of the West View Club was brilliant and it appears Paul Muzzio's team is going to be a serious contender for the Rooney title.

Van Horn ran 60 yards for the first touchdown. It was a cutback that left the Firemen's defense standing still. Mehler scored the other two touchdowns. Boots Klinzing provided the punch, while Politz still is a great player when it comes to strategy.

It was impossible to judge the ability of either the Olympics or the Potters for the playing field was ankle deep in mud. Andy Cutler has a good club, plenty of defensive ability being shown. His backfield is a little light, and will work to better advantage on a dry field. Goldberg, calling the signals for the Tubers, called too many trick plays.

ROONEYS PLAY BURNS

The third game of the Conference will be staged at Parnassus High School Field, Wednesday evening, the Rooneys clashing with the Dan Burns Club, of New Kensington. The game will mark the champions' first appearance this season on the gridiron. Yesterday's lineups:

East Liverpool		Olympics

APPEALING BATTLE

It is doubtful if the Garden could have arranged a more appealing opening attraction than this one and the fans have responded in noble fashion with a heavy advance purchase of tickets.

Sunny Jim McVey, local Negro middleweight puncher, meets Bruno Sala, of Donora, in the eight-round semi-final, and U. S. Carpentier, of New Kensington, boxes Bobby Vogel, of Erie, and Don Asto, Uniontown amateur, turns professional against Kenny Davis, of East Liverpool, O., in the two six-round preliminaries, the first of which gets under way at 8:30 o'clock.

The Castle Bowl, in New Castle, also begins its fall and winter season tonight, with an all-star card of local talent consisting of two six-round bouts and four four-rounders for the benefit of the Harry McBride Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars. Johnny Jennings and Tommy Arnold are in the main bout.

PANKA MEETS CLARK

Meanwhile George Panka, Homestead heavyweight, is continuing his drive to reach top form for his 10-round main bout of the post-season show to be staged in the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, Wednesday night. He meets Ace Clark, giant Negro, of Philadelphia, who has boxed Primo Carnera and other standout opponents. Eddie Reed, clever Negro lightweight, of Philadelphia, and Mickey Duris, of Johnstown, are in the eight-round semi-final.

HOFF SETS RECORD

OSLO, Norway, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—Charley Hoff, Norwegian professional, cleared 4.32 meters (14 feet 2 5-128 inches) in the pole vault here yesterday. The world amateur record for the pole vault is 14 feet 1½ inches, set at Fresno, Cal., in 1928, by Lee Barnes.

OCKEY STARS SHIFTED

MONTREAL, Sept. 28.—(INS)—Moguls of the National Hockey League in conclave here since Friday were on their way home today after the most important meeting of the league since its inception.

The league will still be divided into two groups, the American and the International.

The New York Americans obtained Joe Lamb, who will be tried out at right wing. The Americans also have taken over Willie Kilrea, younger brother of Hector, a forward; Len Grosvenor, center, and Allan Shields, defense man.

D'Arcy Coulson and Harold Starr, both back guards, went to the Montreal Maroons.

The New York Rangers bagged Hibbie Milks, Cliff Barton and Bud Jarvis, who were with the Quakers, formerly the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Toronto Maple Leafs took over Frankie Finnegan and Syd Howe. Finnegan captained the Ottawa squad during their last campaign and Howe was with the Quakers. Both are forwards. Art Ross added Bill Touhey, Ottawa center, to his already lengthy roster, while Chicago grabbed Jerry Lowrey, Philly center ice star.

LINCOLN FIELDS MUTUELS

UPSETS MARK GRID GAMES

The Dukes acquitted themselves honorably against West Virginia, even though they lost. Neale's eleven was disappointing, even for a first game, and may as well concede this week's decision to Fordham unless it improves its defensive play and smoothes its offense 50 per cent. Duquesne, with Oglethorpe, beaten Saturday by Chattanooga, on the list for a tussle at Forbes Field Friday night, needs to improve its line play. The Red and Blue rush line looked very ragged against the Mountaineers.

JACKETS UPSET DOPE

Waynesburg, of course, is the toast of the sector following its win over Penn State. For all the Lions looked very unimpressive in pre-season drills, and the Jackets seemed to be more formidable than usual, I thought State would win, although by no more of a margin than it was beaten. The fact that the triumph was recorded over his alma mater made the victory all the sweeter for Frank Wolf.

Southern California, which delights in running up big scores on weaker opponents, can spend the rest of the season making up for the setback at the hands of St. Mary's. Forward passes led to the Trojan flop. Howard Jones has another tough one to get past this week in Paul Shissler's Oregon Aggies.

Other district contests resulted about as was to be expected. Wash-Jeff had to battle all the way to turn back West Virginia Wesleyan. The up-and-coming Slippery Rock Teachers held Westminster to a 6-0 score. Maude Crum's Allegheny Gators walloped Clarion, 45-0, and Davis-Elkins made it two in a row by socking it to Concord.

COVENANTERS WIN

Geneva had to take to the air again to beat out rugged St. Francis Friday night, indicating that Harpster has not as yet uncovered a real ball lugger.

The big games of the coming week-end, aside from the Tech, Wash-Jeff and Pitt-Iowa affairs, feature West Virginia and Fordham in New York; Northwestern and Nebraska at Evanston; Southern California and Oregon State, at Los Angeles; Stanford and Santa Clara at Palo Alto; Georgetown and Western Maryland, at Washington, and the first appearance of the season of Notre Dame, pitted against Indiana, at Bloomington.

New Eugenie Hat Benefits Steel Industry

YOUNGSTOWN, Sept. 28.—The sales executive of a Youngstown independent steel company asserts that the Princess Eugenie hat is responsible for larger pig iron orders from the New England district. The hat factories began to work day and night, reasons the executive, and the woolen mills increased activity. It became necessary to replace parts and machinery. Youngstown is receiving more pig iron orders from New England than it has in a long time.

Stock Exchange Topics

Atchison Has Increased Property Investment Heavily Since 1923

Atchison is now moving at levels approximating its low range in the post-war adjustment period. In the meantime the company has made tremendous investment in property and equipment, the bulk of which has been financed out of earnings.

Net investment in road and equipment at the beginning of this year was $1,094,701,875, an increase of $174,233,912 over the figure shown at the beginning of 1928. Total capitalization at the start of 1931 aggregated $676,966,035, revealing an expansion of but $38,117,241. Surplus at the start of this year stood at $321,311,747, against $231,307,083 eight years ago. The road earned $15.48 a share for its junior stock in 1923 when it was paying $6 and had a price range from 108½ to 91¾. Last year it earned $12.86 a share, paying $10 annually, and earnings for the current year based on actual result for the first six months with the last half estimated are calculated to equal about $9.60 a share on the common.

The opening today was in contrast with that on the resumption of business last week when the market had to withstand the news of London's suspension of free gold payments. At that time exchange officials found it advisable to prohibit "short sales" as a means of averting complete dislocation of prices in consequence of raiding tactics on the part of the bears. With that part of the trading fraternity finding the short side unattractive in view of the stringent nature of questionnaire data now demanded daily, the market maintained an even keel through the first half of the day in face of news of the latest several new departures from the gold standard.

Efforts to explain the constantly changing whims of the market have proven so vain, even on the part of the so-called insiders, that comment on the outlook for stocks as the new week opens is strangely absent. Suspending of the gold standard by Sweden and Norway was expected to have slight, if any, effect in Wall street. Even chartists are bewildered by the sudden and erratic turnabouts which have been experienced of late, and theories by this group conflict sharply from all the known evidence on hand.

It all goes back to the heavy selling days of last Saturday and Monday, which at the time were believed to have constituted a genuine selling climax from which an automatic rebound was in order. The recovery developed according to expectations, but the secondary reaction which followed and wiped out virtually all of the advance, upset predictions of bullish onlookers.

As measured by the Dow-Jones industrial averages, the closing level on Monday a week ago was 109.40. In line with the theory that a secondary reaction after the initial upturn should have been checked slightly above these figures, the decline on Thursday was not expected to fall below a general level of 110-112. Instead it fell through to 107.79, definitely below Monday's support points. The further sagging of prices in Saturday's abbreviated session has carried this index to approximately this same level, or 107.36, to be exact.

Thus a temporary bottom has been established, but in order to convince observers that a new upturn is in store, definite buying support must be encountered today somewhere around these levels. The action of the market today will determine to a considerable extent whether powerful banking interests regard current quotations low enough to warrant concentrated buying support, regardless of outside factors of uncertainty.

Liverpool Wheat Market.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 28.—The market opened ⅛ to ¼ penny higher and at 1:20 p. m. was unchanged to ⅛ penny up.

Commerce Department to Study Retailers Here

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

REVOLUTIONARY CHANGES IN RETAIL distribution are expected to result from a special survey of Pittsburgh to be started by the Department of Commerce this week. The survey will be confined to retail grocery stores, but it is believed that the findings will prove to be of value to all types of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers.

The work of the survey is to be outlined by J. W. Millard at a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium tonight. Mr. Millard took part in a similar survey in Louisville, Ky., which attracted nation-wide attention and is resulting in far reaching changes in distribution methods.

The meeting tonight will be held under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Association of Manufacturers' Representatives. C. A. Kolb, president of the association and chairman of a special committee organized to influence the Department of Commerce to undertake the survey here, has been working for the past year to secure the advantages of the study for Pittsburgh. His efforts have resulted in a $15,000 appropriation. Leading Pittsburgh business men will contribute an additional $5,000. Efforts will be made to secure a further appropriation to expand the scope of the survey next year.

Failures Eliminated

MUCH HAS BEEN SAID in recent years about the problem of the small retailer. The high mortality rate in this class of business offers serious difficulties to both manufacturers and wholesalers. The survey made at Louisville got at the roots of the trouble. It showed just why the small grocer does not make money. It found remedies for many of the faults in management. It disclosed the wasteful distribution practices of manufacturers and wholesalers and opened the way for changes which have materially increased profits in the industry.

The tangible results of the survey have been outstanding. There were 360 bankrupt independent grocers in Louisville in 1928. In the next year the survey was started and failures were reduced to 15. In the following year there were only three.

To Extend Scope of Study

THE STUDY TO BE MADE here will not merely duplicate the work done at Louisville. Using the results of that survey, the scope of the work will be expanded into new phases in this city.

In Louisville the survey was responsible for the elimination of slow moving stocks. Methods of displaying merchandise were improved. Some of the stores which took advantage of the survey increased their sales from 20 to 25 per cent.

It has been estimated that avoidable wastes amount to from 10 to 15 per cent of the gross of this country's business.

Mr. Kolb points out that the members of the Pittsburgh Association of Manufacturers' Representatives do an annual business of $70,000,000. On this basis there is a possible saving of $7,000,000 to $10,000,000 a year in the Pittsburgh district alone.

POUND RALLIES IN LONDON

Currencies of Germany, Belgium, Sweden, Norway, Spain and Italy weakened as compared with British sterling.

ROME, Sept. 28.—(INS)—The stock exchange directors today decreed that all transactions must be preceded by the cash payment of 25 per cent of the transfer price of any shares. The decree went into effect immediately, causing a virtual suspension of trading.

The Bank of Italy has raised its discount rate from 5½ per cent to 7 per cent.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—(AP)—Stock exchanges in Germany will remain closed until further notice, the Boerse committee announced this evening.

The Boerse was closed last Monday, the day Great Britain suspended the gold standard, and has remained closed since.

PARIS, Sept. 28.—The Bourse was irregular, more stocks losing than gaining. Sterling was better but the florin eased.

Dodge Estimates U. S. Building Budget

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(INS)—Approximately $4,000,000,000 will be spent for construction in the United States between October, 1931, and October, 1932, according to a forecast made by the F. W. Dodge Corporation in an article copyrighted by the Blaker Advertising Agency, Inc.

Figures and facts compiled by the corporation's division of statistics and research in collaboration with 18 sponsoring publications showed that the building market was at its lowest ebb with a possibility of a brighter future. The $4,000,000,000 expenditure was regarded as equivalent to $5,000,000,000 at the 1929 dollar value.

Lone Star Gas Gets Properties in Texas

Community Natural Gas Company, subsidiary of Lone Star Gas Corporation, has acquired gas distributing plants in Abilene and Cisco, Tex., adding 8,000 meters to the Lone Star system.

Visible Grain Supply.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes in bushels: Wheat decreased [illegible]; corn decreased 983,000; oats increased 791,000; rye increased 809,000; barley decreased 89,000.

CAR SALES OFF IN AUGUST

DETROIT, Sept. 28.—(AP.)—R. L. Polk & Co. in its weekly survey of the automobile industry reports that sales of new passenger cars and commercial vehicles have declined steadily since January in comparison with the five-year average.

From 70.09 per cent of the five-year average in January new passenger car sales declined to an estimated 52.33 per cent in August and commercial vehicles from 94.38 per cent in January to 71.22 per cent in August, the figures show. The estimate for August is based on reports from 44 states.

New car sales in 44 states in August were 147,220 units. This is a decline of 23.87 per cent under the total for August, 1930.

Wholesale Price Index Shade Lower

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Although the wholesale price index of the National Fertilizer Association declined only 3 fractional points during the latest week, prices for certain basic raw materials with world markets sank to new low levels. Cotton, rubber, coffee and silk prices declined during the latest week. The latest index number for 476 commodity prices is 67.3. A month ago the index stood at 67.6, while two months ago it was 68.8 and a year ago it was 83.6.

Insurance Payments Will Set Record

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 28.—More than $93,000,000 will be distributed this year as benefits under plans of group life insurance now in effect in this country, B. A. Page, vice president of Travelers Insurance, stated.

The amount will be the largest ever distributed in a single year during the nearly two decades that group insurance has been in effect in this country, he said.

British Rubber Stocks Decrease

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Stocks of crude rubber here on September 26 totaled 80,055 tons, a decrease of 993 tons from the preceding week.

Chesapeake Buys 45,000 Tons Rails

CLEVELAND, Sept. 28.—The Chesapeake and Ohio has purchased 45,000 tons steel rails. The order was distributed among Carnegie Steel, Illinois Steel and Bethlehem Steel Company.

STOCK MARKET SPOTTY WITH FIRM TONE

Gains Made in Early Rally Not Well Maintained; Rail And Copper Shares Stiffen

NEW YORK, Sept. 28 (AP.)—Financial markets were somewhat spotty, but maintained a firm undertone at the start of the new week.

Stocks encountered scattered selling in the morning, but rallied moderately after midday. As the afternoon wore on, however, gains were not well maintained. Weak spots cropped out in foreign bonds and foreign exchanges, but most of the leaders were well supported.

Coppers and rails developed notable firmness in the share market, and morning losses ranging from 1 to 5 points in various sections of the list were largely regained. Issues rising 1 to 3 points included Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting, American Metals, American Can, Bethlehem Steel, Eastman, Allied Chemical, American Tobacco B, Consolidated Gas, Electric Power and Light, Santa Fe Railroad, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Chesapeake and Ohio, New Haven and others. Soft spots in the morning selling included Kresge, Procter and Gamble and Coca Cola, off 3 to 5.

WHEAT PRICES SHOW LOSS

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Grains showed an early downward trend today, affected by instability of sterling. Sweden and Norway's abandonment of the gold standard was also construed as bearish. Opening unchanged to ½c off, wheat afterward sagged further. Corn started ¼c down and subsequently underwent an additional sag.

Adding to the bearish influence of foreign exchange was announcement that the official estimate of the Hungarian wheat crop was now 73,600,000 bushels, against earlier estimates of 65,036,000. A detailed report which attracted much attention showed that the average price of wheat at 500 shipping points in the United States last week was 37.1 cents a bushel, compared with 68 cents a year ago, and that the average price at Canadian stations was 38.2 cents, against 55.6 cents.

Liberal receipts of corn in Chicago acted as a weight on values, and so, too, did favorable weather for field work.

U. S. Acts Creditably After British Events; Market Holds Own.

By B. C. FORBES

B. C. Forbes

ALL THINGS CONSIDERED America has acted creditably following the epochal events in Britain. The New York Stock Exchange showed practically no net loss for the week. With the exceptions of corn, cotton and rubber no important commodities sank to new low prices.

A FRIEND REMARKED last Monday to perhaps the most powerful banker in the United States:

"I suppose I was a fool. Not knowing that the Bank of England was to suspend gold payments, I bought some stocks on Saturday."

The banker replied emphatically:

That, I believe, reflects the prevailing sentiment in the most influential financial circles at this moment.

THE WORLD has managed to jog along before now with unrestricted gold payments suspended by the Bank of England. There was really more apprehension in inner circles here before Britain took the plunge than there is now. The bad news is out, and proverbially Wall street welcomes that in preference to overhanging uncertainty.

Britain has definitely announced her intention of meeting all her international obligations in gold. Whether the pound sterling will be re-established on the gold parity of $4.86⅝, or whether it will be revalued at a lower figure, is a much discussed question. This writer's guess is that the pound, after a period of fluctuation, will be revalued at a distinctly lower figure, not $4.40 as currently suggested, but perhaps $3.50 or even somewhat less.

It is unthinkable that London would continue indefinitely to be plagued by a widely-fluctuating currency. That would mean goodbye to her aspirations to figure importantly as a world financial center. There is nothing within sight at the moment to indicate that Britain will be able in the measureable future to re-establish sterling at $4.86⅝. Rather does it appear that she will have to swallow the bitter pill of "devaluing" her currency after the example set by France, Germany and most other nations.

A LOT OF NONSENSE is being published concerning the advantages Britain will derive from "going off the gold standard." Admittedly, she will enjoy advantages in competing in world markets temporarily. But in time her wage earners will wake up to the fact that there has been a very substantial reduction in the actual purchasing power of their wages and it is a foregone conclusion that, as prices rise, they will insist upon a corresponding rise in their pay.

If a debased currency were the panacea for national depression, how gloriously prosperous Germany, Russia, France and other nations would have been when their currency was becoming more and more worthless!

YOU HAVE READ much about the "earmarking" of gold in New York. This means that other nations, notably France, have notified the Federal Reserve Bank in New York that they may call for the shipment to them of gold on deposit here. Not far from $200,000,000 was "ear-marked" last week.

This should occasion no misgivings whatsoever. The very best thing that could happen would be substantial redistribution of the wholly abnormal mountains of gold held in the United States and in France—fully five billions here and almost half as much in France. Neither country needs anything like that total. Other countries could comfortably possess more than they do possess.

As a matter of fact, the banks in this country should need arise could issue upwards of 50 billions additional credit. New York banks alone could supply 19 billions, or additional currency to the tune of five billions could be furnished.

TWO THINGS among others could and should be done with all promptitude to hasten revival: Sanction of an increase in railway freight rates by the Interstate Commerce Commission and completion of the four colossal railway combinations planned for the East would greatly cheer the financial world.

WHAT WE NEED most of all is faith—and work. Faith without work is dead. Before long there will be unmistakable manifestations of faith. There always has been in the past, after periods of acute nervousness and unemployment. There will be again. That's certain, even though the timid and short-sighted may at this moment regard it as impossible.

DEFLATION HIT AS DISTRESS REMEDY

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The world last week witnessed at home and abroad some of the consequences of unrestrained and unmanaged deflation.

Mr. Rukeyser

Great Britain's suspension of the gold standard was the most dramatic effect of conditions growing out of the continuous fall in the commodity price level which greatly increased the real burden of all outstanding debts and of all fixed charges of government and industry. The shifting of values led to lack of confidence in the British position, causing heavy withdrawals, which were stopped only by the temporary abandonment of the obligation of the Bank of England to dispose of gold holdings on demand.

The epidemic of wage cutting by large American corporations after nearly two years of restraint was likewise an effect of unchecked deflation, which at least got industrial prices and industrial costs out of balance. Equilibrium was plainly desirable, but it would have been socially far more advantageous to have stabilized on a high level rather than a low level. To have stabilized on a high level would have entailed measures to raise commodity prices such as have been urged by numerous economists, including John Maynard Keynes. That course would have entailed counter-deflationary or perhaps inflationary measures. Inflation is a naughty word, but the world has perhaps not recognized how pauperizing an influence uncontrolled deflation is.

The British experiment in going on a paper money basis reverses the British deflationary policy of the last six years. A corollary of the depreciation of the pound consists of a rise in internal security and commodity prices. Perhaps after the prolonged decline the spectacle of rising prices in Great Britain will end the regimen there of industrial paralysis and stagnation.

Uncontrolled inflation, like uncontrolled deflation, is of course vicious. The British may be expected to act with restraint and good judgment. The time has come for the world to recognize that the real economic evil is in an unstable price level resulting from monetary disturbances. What is desirable is stability, but in the interest of the standard of living of the average worker, it is essential to attempt to create an equilibrium on as high a level as feasible.

The events of last week have at least the merit of clearing the atmosphere of uncertainty.

'Coffee Tasters' Grade Brazil Product

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Grading of Brazilian coffee coming into the United States in return for the 25,000,000 bushels of wheat the Federal Farm Board traded several weeks ago is now being handled by the "coffee tasters" of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange. A total of 100,000 bags—13,200,000 pounds—have been received here and stored in warehouses.

COTTON DROPS TO NEW LOWS

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Cotton opened steady today, 3 points lower to 1 point higher.

Traders here seemed to be paying very little attention to fluctuations in Liverpool, which were attributed to changes in sterling, and orders at the start were quite evenly divided. The trade was a considerable buyer and there was some buying here for continental and commission house account, but offering increased after the opening with the South a considerable seller, while there was some further October liquidation. All months made new low records for the movement and season with December selling off to 6.17 and March to 6.47 under this pressure, with the active months showing net declines of 7 to 8 points by the end of the first half hour.

The Southern selling tapered off after the early decline of 7 or 8 points and the market was quiet later in the morning, with prices holding fairly steady on some covering and trade buying. December worked up from 6.17 to 6.21 and March from 6.47 to 6.50, with the active months ruling about 5 to 7 points net lower at mid-day.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 28.—Cotton—spot in good demand, but moderate business done; prices 31 points lower. American strict good middlings, 5.47; good middlings, 5.62; strict middling, 4.92; middling, 4.77; strict low middling, 4.62; low middling, 4.42; strict good ordinary, 4.02; good ordinary, 3.92. Sales 10,000 bales, including 7,100 American. No receipts. Futures closed quiet and steady. October, 4.36; December, 4.37; January, 4.41; March, 4.47; May, 4.54; July, 4.60.

The Mayor and the Director of the Department of Supplies reserve the right to reject any or all bids submitted.

CHARLES H. KLINE, Mayor.
W. R. DUNLAP, Director.

LOCAL STOCKS IN NARROW RANGE

Lone Star Holds Around Previous Close; Screw And Bolt, Armstrong Off

Most of the active securities on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange opened the new week with a steady price tone. Trading volume was unchanged from last week, with most of the dealings taking place in the fuel department.

In the industrial division Armstrong Cork slipped back a point to 15, a new low for the bear market, and Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt receded fractionally below 5, new low ground for this issue also. Plate Glass sold down to its previous low and Koppers Gas preferred dipped under 90.

CHAPTER XVI.

We walked away—we could not bear to see Seelig at that moment. Ludwig crawled in under his great coats once more. Only Albert remained. Seelig stared at the corpse. The moon came out from behind a cloud and shone down upon it. The fat body stooped forward. The sergeant major stood there and peered down into the pallid face below, upon which the inconceivable expression of horror was frozen to a stillness that almost screamed.

"Better say the prayer now and get back," said Albert coldly.

The sergeant major wiped his forehead. "I can't," he murmured. The horror had caught him.—We had all had that experience: for weeks together a man might feel nothing. Then suddenly there would come some new, unforeseen thing and it would break him down. With green face he stumbled off to the dugout.

"He imagined they pelted you with jujubes up here," said Tjaden dryly.

The rain fell more heavily. The sergeant major did not return. At last we fetched Ludwig Breyer from under his overcoats once again. In a quiet voice he repeated a Paternoster.

We passed the dead down. Weil lent a hand below, taking them from us. I noticed that he was trembling. Almost inaudibly, he was whispering: "You shall be avenged," again and again. I looked at him astonished.

KOSOLE LEARNS TRUTH

"What's got you?" I asked him. "These aren't the first, you know. You'll have your work cut out avenging them all." Then he said no more.

When we had packed in the first rows, Valentin and Jupp came stumbling up with a stretcher.

"This bloke's alive still," said Jupp, setting down the stretcher.

Kosole gave it a glance. "Not for long though," said he. "We might wait for him."

"He'd only die just the same," said Albert, pointing to the blood.

We turned him over on his side and Max Weil attended to him, while we went on with our work. Valentin was helping me now. We passed Glaser down. "Just think of his wife!" murmured Valentin.

"Look out, here comes Schroder," Jupp called to us as he

> Synopsis
> Ernst, who enlisted as a schoolboy, tells the story of a group of war comrades who march home when peace is made. The postwar world seems strange and puzzling, everything is changed, themselves most of all. Ernst finds that he longs for a sight of his companions of the trenches. He looks them up as soon as he has greeted his family and a game of cards starts at the barracks. Tjaden bursts in saying that he has found Seelig, a former sergeant major whom the men disliked. Seelig is now a bartender. All set out for Seelig's cafe, picking up Kosole en route. They have been at the cafe. Suddenly the scene in the trenches returns vividly. Schroder has been killed—because Seelig would not give him the leave he was entitled to.

"Shut your mouth!" hissed Broeer.

Kosole still had the body in his arms. "Who?" he asked uncomprehending.

"Schroder," repeated Jupp supposing Ferdinand knew.

"Don't be funny, you fool! He was captured," growled Kosole angrily.

"It is Ferdinand," said Albert Trosske, who was standing near by.

BURIES FRIEND

We held our breath. Kosole gathered up the body and climbed out. He took his torch from his pockets and shone it upon the corpse. He stooped down close over what was left of the face and examined it.

"Thank heaven," the sergeant major's gone," whispered Karl.

We stood motionless through the next seconds. Kosole straightened himself up. "Give's a shovel," said he sharply. I handed him one. We expected bloody murder. But Kosole merely began to dig. Allowing none to help him he made a grave for Schroder apart. He placed him in it himself. He was too stricken to think of Seelig.

By dawn both graves were finished. The wounded man had died in the meantime, so we put him in with the rest. After treading the ground firm, we set up the crosses. With a copying pencil Kosole wrote Schroder's name on one that was still blank and hung a steel helmet on top of it.

As soon as it was light the sergeant major came out of a dugout nearby. We supposed he had gone long ago. He stank of rum for miles and now only wanted to get back to the rear. Kosole let out a bellow when he saw him. Luckily, Willy was by. He sprang at Kosole and held him fast. But it took the strength of all four of us to keep him from breaking loose and murdering Seelig. It was a full hour before he had sufficiently recovered his senses to see that he would only make trouble for himself if he went after him. But by Schroder's grave he swore to get even with Seelig.

Now there stands Seelig at the bar and not five yards from him sits Kosole. But neither is a soldier any longer.

Valentin tosses down the schnapps. "Soak it up, Ferdinand," says he, "that's the main thing."

SEELIG CHANGED

Willy orders the next round. Tjaden is already half tight. "Well, Seelig, you old blighter," he bawls, "no more field punishment now, eh? Have one with me." He slaps his former superior officer so heartily on the back that it nearly chokes him. A year ago that would have been enough to land him for court-martial, or in a madhouse.

Kosole looks from the bar to his glass and from his glass back again to the bar, and at the fat, obsequious fellow behind the beer pumps. He shakes his head. "It's not the same man, you know, Ernst," he says.

So it seems to me also. I hardly recognize Seelig now. In my mind, he was so much of one piece with his notebook and his uniform, that I could hardly even have imagined what he would look like in his shirt, to say nothing of a bartender.

Willy gives Kosole a dig in the ribs to stir him up. "Well?"

"I don't know, Willy," says Ferdinand, bewildered. "Think I ought to give him a smack over the mug or not? I didn't expect it would be like this. Just get an eyeful of the way he is running about serving the old beast! I just haven't the heart to do it."

Tjaden orders and orders. To him it is a great joke to see his superior officer go hopping about at his bidding.

"Of what?" says Kosole stiffening.

"Rum. I've still a spot or two left in the cupboard there," says Seelig innocently, going to fetch it. Kosole looks as if he had been struck in the face and glares after him.

"He's forgotten all about it, Ferdinand," says Willy. "He wouldn't have risked that else."

KOSOLE PUZZLED

"I suppose you don't remember getting tight on rum from sheer funk once, eh? You ought to be a night watchman in a morgue, you ought!"

Seelig makes a pacifying gesture. "That was a long time ago," says he, "that doesn't count any more."

Ferdinand lapses into silence again. If Seelig would but once speak out of his turn, the fun would begin. But this compliance puzzles Kosole and leaves him irresolute.

"Ach, man!" cries Tjaden. "You might have given it to me, then!" With his fingers he tries to save what he can, but it is not much.

The place empties little by little. "Closing time, gentlemen!" cries Seelig, and pulls down the revolving shutter. We get up to go.

"Well, Ferdinand?" I say. He shakes his head. He cannot bring himself to it. The waiter there—that's not the real Seelig at all.

Seelig opens the door for us. "Au revoir, gentlemen! Pleasant dreams!"

"Gentlemen!" sniggers Tjaden. "'Gentlemen'—'Swine' he used to say."

Kosole is already almost outside when, glancing back along the floor, his eyes light on Seelig's legs, still clad in the same ill-omened leggings as of old. His trousers, too, have the same close-fitting military cut, with piping down the seams. From the waist up he is innkeeper, but from the waist down—sergeant major. That settles it.

DAILY SHORT STORY

History

Girl Changes Her Opinion About Marriage

"No."

Mrs. Thorne regarded Ollie with surprise.

"I thought that you were."

Ollie shook her head.

"He wants to marry you. He has been pestering me about it, trying to find out if there is any chance for you to come to a decision."

"Let him guess, mother."

"But if you have made your decision, why not tell him? Don't keep him dangling."

"Ah, but you are so old-fashioned, dear," Ollie told her. "Why shouldn't I keep him dangling? He takes me places and is awfully nice. If I tell him that I do not intend to marry him he'll fade out of my young life. Good boy friends are scarce."

"What have you against Ted Harper, Ollie? He's a nice boy. He has a fine little business. Who are you waiting for, the Prince of Wales?"

"He's a New Yorker, mother."

"So are you."

"I mean, I've decided not to marry a New Yorker. They are altogether too sophisticated—and they are secretly rather wild. I much prefer some sterling chap from some other locality."

"Are you looking for a Sir Galahad, Ollie?"

MOTHER'S ADVICE

"Now don't make fun of me, mother."

"You want some young man who never has sown wild oats, I suppose. Some chap who would not sow wild oats."

"I'm not as silly as all of that, mother. But I just have a sort of feeling that these New York young men know too many sporty friends, too many questionable women. They are too fond of sneaking away to speakeasies and dives and places, and marriage wouldn't mean a thing after a while. They wouldn't settle down for keeps, but just play around as usual, quite as though they weren't married at all."

"You've been reading some of these new and trashy novels. If I were you I would take Ted. He's about as nice as any of your friends, nicer than any of the other boys you have brought home."

"Trying to marry me off?"

Her mother nodded.

"A girl should be married. I believe in it. It is best."

"And safest, you want to say."

Her mother smiled at this.

"We're all human. You are a sweet girl and I have always been proud of you, but because you are my daughter it doesn't mean that you are more angelic than any other girl. What I mean is this—marriage is best."

OLLIE LAUGHS

"Well, I don't think I want a New York man for a husband, mother. I like Ted. I like him heaps, and he's crazy about me, I am sure. At the same time he would probably be just like all other city men."

"Are you going to advertise for a pure-minded and innocent young farmer—object matrimony?"

"Don't be silly, darling. There is plenty of time and I shall find Mister Right Man. Don't forget, we are going to make that trip through to the coast, visiting relatives in a dozen towns and cities en route."

"You won't enjoy the trip or the scenery in that case. Your attention will be devoted solely to finding the impossible and saintly young man you have decided upon for a husband."

As usual, Ted urged Ollie to make up her mind.

"You know whether or not you like me, don't you, Babe?"

"Of course I like you, Ted—only I've not made up my mind about getting married—at present."

"Why waste time? Aw come now, Honey—be a nice girl and say your little 'Yes' and we'll be married right away. I can get away for a month—we could do a corner of Europe if you wished. Paris and Vienna and Monte Carlo, you know."

"Don't rush me, Ted—that's a dear. Honestly, I don't want to be married right away."

And so matters were as usual between Ollie and Ted. Ted still believed that she would become his wife before so very long and Ollie was quite sure that she would never be his wife or the wife of any of these ultra-wise and too sophisticated Gotham boys.

It was at this time that Aunt Tilly came on from Nebraska to visit her sister, Ollie's mother. Aunt Tilly had married twice and was then widowed. Her second husband had been a widower with a boy of 10 when Aunt Tilly married him.

PROSPEROUS YOUNG MAN

This boy, Wilbur Sennett, came on with his stepmother. Only Wilbur was then 28.

Ollie hadn't seen her Aunt Tillie since she was a little girl. It was when her aunt was a widower for the first time. Ollie, nor her mother, had ever seen Wilbur before.

Wilbur Sennett was tall, good-looking, pleasant spoken and and generally pleasing. Wilbur was already a prosperous young merchant with quite a chain of stores throughout his section of the state.

It occured to Ollie that Wilbur, being no relation to her in the least, would make a splendid husband. She could live out in Nebraska. It would be lots better being the wife of a prosperous chain store merchant and prominent in his small home city than being one of seven million in New York and cutting no social figure whatever.

Ted wasn't seeing much of Ollie then. He didn't complain.

Ollie felt it her duty to take Wilbur about the city. He was quite willing to go. He and his stepmother had driven all the way from Nebraska. The car was modern and attractive. Ollie was glad to act as a guide.

Driving down Broadway Ollie showed him where the Little Church Around the Corner was located.

"Yes, I know—it got it's name because the rector of a fashionable church refused to preach the funeral sermon of an actor and said, 'There's a little church around the corner where you might go.'"

Wilbur told her all the details.

"Market and Broad in Newark is just about as busy. It was here at what is now Forty-second and Fifth avenue that Washington, fleeing from defeat at the battle of Long Island, considered himself licked and wanted to give up—to surrender. There used to be a reservoir where the library is. When it was built, people said it was too large, that the city could never use half the water—"

Ollie stifled a yawn.

When they were going down to the Battery Wilbur pointed out a spot on Bowling Green. He told her at length about how the Dutch used to bowl on the grass.

"The statue was right there," he said.

"What statue?" Ollie asked.

Wilbur regarded her with pained surprise.

"Don't tell me you never heard of the leaden statue of King George III—how the rebels tore it down and made the statue into bullets to shoot at the king's soldiers!"

He told her about Barnum having his "museum" on Ann street and what Barnum said about suckers.

"I thought Tex Guinan said that," Ollie remarked.

He told her where Clement Moore was born, he told her the date Grant's Tomb was built. He pointed out the spot where the steamer Clermont paddled up the Hudson. He went into details about the Hessians driving Washington's troops across the Hudson from Forts Washington and Tryon.

For weeks and weeks it seemed to Ollie—it was only three weeks—Wilbur Sennett told Ollie more things about New York than she dreamed possible—and bored her to desperation in the telling. His tone of voice seemed to hint that he believed her pitifully ignorant.

Wilbur pointed out the site of the tavern and rum shop of one of the early Astors, also the site of Peter Cooper's glue factory. He told her how much Brooklyn Bridge cost, when the old World Building was the tallest structure down there, and a seemingly endless amount of, to her, senseless and useless information.

TO MARRY TED

After Wilbur had departed for Nebraska and his chain stores Ted was in evidence again.

It wasn't long before Ollie said, "Mother, Ted and I will be married on the tenth of next month."

"I'm going to marry Ted because he is a New Yorker."

"But I don't understand—your objection to him was that he was a New Yorker. Why this change?"

"Because he can't bore me with musty history about New York—New Yorkers know absolutely nothing about New York—thank goodness."

PLOT EXPOSED!

It has been known for some time in official circles that the depression is caused by a vicious whispering campaign. The difficulty has been in apprehending the actual perpetrators of this gloomy propaganda. Thanks to clean living and hard work, our Candid Camera has caught the above couple in the very act of spreading bad news. The raw film has been turned over to the Treasury Department, and it is only a matter of time before administration sleuths will have this proud pair at bay, and all will be right with the world.

Bad Appointments

Gov. Pinchot talks a good deal about giving the people of Pennsylvania a square deal.

We wonder if he thinks he is giving the people a square deal in placing on the state's payroll in important positions gang politicians like Howard Neely and Alexander Cooper, whom he appointed Friday as special attorneys in the Department of Justice.

Neely and Cooper, henchmen of Senator James J. Coyne, are under a cloud, and Pinchot might at the very least have waited, as a matter of decency, until they had satisfactorily cleared themselves—if they can—before appointing them to these posts.

They are alleged to have obtained hundreds of tax receipts for use in the election by representing themselves as having been authorized to pay the taxes by the voters concerned. The great number of these authorizations has raised a question as to whether they were personally issued by the taxables, and suspicion is heightened by the assertion that one of the men for whom Neely obtained a tax receipt has been dead for 18 years.

The charges are of a nature calling for grand jury investigation, and it would not be surprising if the grand jury now investigating election frauds would consider them before it adjourns.

We are accustomed to see such appointments made by bosses like Mayor Kline, who pays little heed to his followers' reputation for integrity provided they deliver the votes; but it is a shock to find Pinchot stooping to the same tactics.

Does it mean that, for the sake of building up a machine to advance his political fortunes, he has abandoned the principles for which he once stood?

Commendable Speed

District Attorney Park Has Acquitted Himself Creditably In the Voting Machine Inquiry.

H. D. Hirsh, attorney for the Poole Engineering and Machine Company, is placed in an unenviable light by District Attorney Park's disclosure that thorough search reveals nothing whatever to confirm Hirsh's charge that Poole voting machines on which the handles broke in the primary election had been deliberately filed.

Hirsh has tried to get out of it by saying he was misquoted. He was not misquoted in the Sun-Telegraph.

It was his statements that led to the indictment and arrest in Baltimore of a former Poole Company employe, who was suspected of tampering with the machines.

The man is perfectly innocent, Park announces, and the case against him will be nol prossed immediately. Furthermore, there is no evidence that any of the voting machines which broke down did so because of criminal tampering.

It is gratifying that Allegheny County, afflicted with so many kinds of election crookedness, was at least spared this crime.

Reciprocity Helps Trade

It is a paramount duty for Congress at its next session to remove the government imposed artificial barriers to flourishing trade.

It stimulated buyers of American merchandise to look elsewhere.

Bad in practice, the law is even worse in theory.

It is based on the stupid philosophy that prosperity is possible when countries deliberately erect walls which shut off trade.

It ignores the economic truism that Europe and the rest of the world cannot pay their debts to us, unless we permit them to ship merchandise across our borders.

International trade cannot proceed along a one way street. If we want to export, we must also import.

The foreign trade statistics for August reflect depression abroad. American exports in that month amounted to only $165,000,000, compared with $180,670,000 in July, contrary to the usual seasonal trend. Likewise, imports reached only $166,000,000, compared with $174,474,000 in July.

Congress by a new tariff policy should lift the business world from its lethargy and pessimism.

It should supplement its tariff policy, which is intended for the protection of home industry, with a series of reciprocity treaties with friendly powers, who should be encouraged to send their products to us.

Such a broad-visioned attitude would tend to end the latent economic warfare which is bearing down world trade.

It is far better to treat foreign countries in a businesslike manner than to seek to pauperize governments through debt manipulation and cancellation.

Under better trade conditions, the capacity of debtors to pay and to keep their self-respect will be heightened.

There will be a rebirth of enthusiasm and courage throughout the business world if Congress removes the blight of the unsound Hawley-Smoot tariff.

First the WICKERSHAM COMMISSION "discovered" that Prohibition is a blight.

Then the AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION went overwhelmingly on record for repeal.

And then the AMERICAN LEGION voted 1,008 to 394 for ACTION. The Legion asks Congress to submit repeal or modification of the Eighteenth Amendment to the States, and to request each State to submit the proposition to its voters.

Meanwhile, Secretary Hyde is studying the crop value of a good beer law to farmers; and in back of that, an official of the American Federation of Labor has estimated that light wines and beer will provide MORE THAN A MILLION JOBS FOR JOBLESS MEN IN SIX MONTHS.

All in all, the padlock days seem to be nearing their end.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Middle-Aged Whoopee

It is high time that the Younger Generation began setting a good example for the Older Generation!

* * *

It is positively startling the way the Older Generation is stepping out and following in the footsteps of flaming youth. Dad and Mother have ceased to be shocked at Son and Daughter, and are beginning to wonder what they are MISSING!

Many a married pair, who have lived in happy, unconscious "bondage" for 20 years, and who might have jogged along contentedly for another 20, are jolted out of their complacency by the example of their "emancipated" children, and decide to have a fling at the "new freedom" before they die.

And Mother is running around to beauty parlors, bargaining for a face-lift, wearing ultra gowns, and learning the new dance steps from a satin-haired gigolo—all in a desperate effort to "hold" Him, whom she once thought as secure as her back teeth!

Just as they should be settling down comfortably into middle age and watching for the sunset, they are sitting up and watching Son and Daughter and deciding to "try it on" themselves. Wouldn't that break your heart?

Dad gets an awful kick out of the realization that, after 20 years of toeing the mark, he doesn't have to abide by Mother's commands any longer. And Mother feels a new thrill when she discovers that her future is not all past, but full of colorful possibilities.

Not until Dad feels a twinge of his old rheumatism or some young golddigger throws a scare into him, and Mother finds that her bridge-work has failed to charm some young gigolo, do they come back to their senses, and realize that what is sauce for the gosling may be PTOMAINE for the old goose and gander!

But, don't blame the oldsters. It is flaming youth that has set the pace for the wild, wild ways of torrid middle-age.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Are you safe?

"Yes, of course, I'm safe," you say. "That is, I'm as safe as the police can make me. Accidents may happen, with all these gangsters about, but I pay money for protection and I'm supposed to get it."

Yes, you pay for protection—against gangsters. But gangsters aren't the worst thing you have to fear, stranger. Police can't protect you against that worst thing . . . nor can taxes buy you immunity.

THE WORST THING YOU HAVE TO FEAR IS YOURSELF.

Your own fear, your own hate and frantic excitement, they can do you more harm than all the gangsters in America. They're more dangerous than sawed-off shot guns or poison gas bombs. Are you safe from THEM?

There is a strangely compelling sentence in Henry Collins Brown's article in the September COSMOPOLITAN—"A MIND THAT FOUND ITSELF." It is compelling because Mr. Brown went through hell in proving its truth.

"In this strange adventure we call life," says he, "it is necessary to be on the alert at all times, and self-control, which seems such an insignificant thing to talk about, is after all the most potent factor in a successful life."

Henry Collins Brown had, for a time, a successful life, of many interests and varied action. But he did not have self-control. His intense imagination seethed with ideas and desires. His outer life was filled with irritations, disappointments and confusion. HE COULD NOT CONTROL HIS OWN REACTIONS TO THESE CIRCUMSTANCES AND SO HE BECAME A MAN BESET. His own fear and fury ran amuck—fell upon him like a pack of wild beasts—drove him headlong, a hunted thing. Drove him into insanity for three dreadful years. He tells the story of those years.

It isn't just Henry Collins Brown's story. It may so easily be your story, or mine. Once we thought that insanity came willy-nilly . . . that it was something beyond human control. Now we know that we can, and tragically often do, WISH INSANITY ON OURSELVES."

"Mental breakdowns do not come overnight," writes Mr. Brown. "There are months even years of preparatory strain."

Years of SELF-INFLICTED STRAIN—as his story shows. Bit by bit, the barrier of SELF-CONTROL crumbling. You've seen it happening in others.

There's that woman . . . we both know her. They say she was a brilliant girl but always very sensitive. Now she's so "queer" that her family must watch her constantly. She has a "persecution complex"—thinks that someone is always spying on her, gossiping about her, trying to do her harm. Has she any real enemies? No. But for years she has magnified trifles—partly through fear, partly through egotism. Now she has an actual obsession. SHE HAS MADE HERSELF INSANE BY HER OWN EMOTIONAL INDULGENCE, HER OWN LACK OF SELF-CONTROL.

It happened to her. It can happen to you. Nine times out of ten, insanity is NOT a disease but A STATE OF MIND. YOU CAN CREATE THAT STATE OF MIND—YOU CAN MAKE YOURSELF INSANE.

"In this strange adventure we call life it is necessary to be alert at all times," says Henry Collins Brown.

Bernard's Experimental Biology

By Archibald Henderson

It has been said of Claude Bernard that he will always rank as the great master of chemical physiology—in its broader outlines. Present day students of digestion, excretion, and the disorders of chemistry within the body and their treatment, of necessity must follow in Bernard's footsteps. He made the first epochal study of the pancreas and its functions. Although he did not discover certain vital things about the pancreas, it is no exaggeration to say that he laid the foundation for the modern treatment of diabetes and allied diseases.

Claude Bernard was born at Saint Julien near Villefranche, in France, on July 12, 1813. For a time he was undecided whether to become a playwright or a man of science. Finally he went to Paris, studied under Magendie, a great authority on the study of living tissues, and received his degree of doctor of science, having taken his degree of doctor of medicine 10 years earlier. In 1854 he was appointed to the chair of physiology in connection with the faculty of sciences, and in 1855 succeeded Magendie as professor of experimental physiology at the College de France.

During the first years of the second half of the Nineteenth Century, Bernard did his greatest work. He concentrated his researches upon a study of the liver and the pancreas. In a study of the latter organ, says his biographer, Sir Michael Foster, the physiologist, Bernard at one stroke made clear its threefold action. He showed that it on the one hand emulsified, and on the other hand split up into fatty acids and glycerine, the neutral fats; he clearly proved that it had a powerful action on starch, converting it into sugar; and lastly, he laid bare its remarkable action on proteid matters. However, Bernard failed to discover what is known as the "internal secretion" of the pancreas, a kind of juice, which passes into the blood, with profound effects upon the chemistry of sugar taken in the food.

Bernard also made some remarkable discoveries concerning the liver. He showed that the liver modifies the sugar which reaches it, turning it into a substance called "glycogen," which simply means to "sugar-maker." Sugar is a chief source of energy in the animal body; and the liver allows enough to pass on for the bodily needs. If, however, the amount of sugar in the blood is insufficient, the liver, as if endowed with conscious forethought, transforms part of its store of glycogen back into sugar, and sends it forward for use.

Three times Bernard was awarded the grand prize of the French Academy of Sciences. He was the first French scientist to receive a public funeral, his death occurring February 10, 1878.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Instinct

Through the ages man has wondered,
Yet has failed to understand
How the little feathered creatures,
Winging high above the land,
Find their way along in trackless
Vistas of the arching sky,
Flying through the sunlit hours
And when storms go roaring by.

What can guide them as they journey,
Never faltering, to their mark?
What can lead these tiny beings
Through the day and through the dark?
"Instinct," man has named this power
Which he does not understand;
But the little feathered creatures,
They are flying in God's hand.

British Editors Condemn Politics in League Court

HOW British opinion is coming to regard the so-called Permanent Court of International Justice of the League of Nations is made apparent by comment appearing in the leading reviews on the League Court's recent decision against the Austro German customs union plan.

Four important publications—the New Statesman and Nation, the Saturday Review, the London Spectator and the Week-End Review—have recorded their views, and in each instance the remarks are severely critical. French influence in the League Court, the palpably political nature of its decision, and its adverse effect on public opinion in the United States, are all stressed.

Excerpts from the four editorial articles follow:

From the Week-End Review.

The verdict of the World Court in The Hague has not reinforced confidence in an organization which hitherto had won an enviable reputation for international impartiality.

When the seven judges of Great Britain, Japan, Belgium, Germany, Holland, the United States and China are defeated by eight others, including the judges of France, Poland, Rumania, Salvador and Colombia, IT IS VERY DIFFICULT TO BELIEVE THAT NO POLITICAL PRESSURE HAS BEEN BROUGHT TO BEAR ON THE JUDGES in order that they may declare the proposed Austro-German customs union to be in contradiction to the treaties of peace.

It will take the Permanent Court a long time to live down this unfortunate verdict.

From the New Statesman and Nation.

THE International Court is not, we fear, likely to add to its prestige by its opinion on the Austro German customs union.

It is not only that the basis of all three opinions is POLITICAL RATHER THAN JUDICIAL IN NATURE.

But even more serious is the nature of the national division in the Court. Broadly, it may be said that the Latin nations are divided against the Teutonic—Japan siding with the minority. The judges, in a word, hardly acted as an impartial body of jurists concerned with a scientific problem of interpretation.

It is not unfair to prophesy that it will be a long time before one of the great powers is willing to seek the advice of the Court upon so grave an issue.

From the London Spectator.

WHAT really emerges is doubt as to the wisdom of encouraging a court, whose strength lies in its detachment from political entanglements to rule on a question in which politics and law are inextricably intermingled.

All that need be said here is that Americans at Geneva are convinced that at the moment when the long-delayed entry of the United States into the Court seemed imminent the Court verdict on the Austro-German question will play directly into the hands of those opponents who are always proclaiming that to go into the Court means going into European politics.

From the Saturday Review.

THERE was little in the judgment of The Hague Tribunal on the proposed Austro-German customs union to recommend the principle of arbitration in international disputes.

It may, of course, have been pure coincidence that the representatives of those powers which took the strongest exception to the scheme held that it was illegal, but to the ordinary layman it looks as if the verdict had been dictated by POLITICAL rather than PURELY JUDICIAL considerations.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Lay late and to the tram to meet my mother-in-law returning from a summer in Ohio and, God helping me, I should like to be as spry at 50 as she at 77. Then to the Biltmore to breakfast with Carl Seitz, the Shanghai shipping man, an old friend whose hair has grown snow-white, too.

All afternoon at my tasks and Lucinda Reichenbach, Harry's widow, and Nellie Webb came and brought Lucinda's griffon, weighing but four pounds. In the evening to see Donald Meek in John Golden's new play which I enjoyed and then to a party in the Messmore Kendall's apartment over the Capitol theater.

Among the gathering were James Montgomery Flagg, Arthur William Brown, Major Bowes, Margaret Illington, Elise Bartlett, Gilbert and Dodo White, from Paris, the guests of honor. So driving to Atlantic City in the brave moonshine and arriving in the pink of a glorious dawn.

A whispered sadistic tale concerns a man about town on a visit to Monte Carlo. A telephone message from his current sweetie in New York informed him that unless she could join him at once by taking a boat sailing at midnight she would leap from the sixteenth story of her hotel. He laughed and hung up. Later a cable from a friend informed him the woman had plunged to death. That night at the gaming tables he feverishly wagered huge sums on the number "16." And ironically gathered in a small fortune.

Needled beer sanctuaries on Eighty-sixth street in the Yorkville section are carrying on with their brightly painted Bavarian fronts and short leather panted yodelers, but the crowds are slim. Too many know the agonizing next morning effects of the Yorkville brew.

The origin of the so-called "black out" skit, the risque climax of which is turning out all the stage lights, is said to have been in the burlesque halls. There has not been a successful revue without them in five years. To my notion the most hilarious was written by Eddie Welch, a Hollywood gag man. The scene is a hotel apartment. A husband off on a trip suddenly returns hoping to catch an Army officer he suspects of paying attention to his wife. He hears a noise in a closet. Drawing his pistol he shouts: "Unless that man in a uniform comes out at once I'll fire." The door opens and out come, in single file, a bell boy, a door man, a street sweeper, elevator starter and so on, winding up with a mounted cop on his horse.

Tailoring establishments are a certain barometer of tumbling and leaping prosperity. Following every prolonged panic the first retail business to swing upward is the tailor. With good times assured, the male animal becomes clothes conscious. I don't know the situation in New York tailoring places and with my second company nerves I'm afraid to ask.

I did hear, however, that de luxe hotels are beginning, figuratively, to sit up and smile wanly. For many months they have been picking at the coverlets. It is said that one of the smaller ones that had a staff of 118 normally was peeled down to a total of 10. At one time it averaged only six patrons a day.

The meanest joke of the year took place in a Madison avenue sandwich salon. A stew fell asleep at a table with his mouth agape. Jokers secured a raw oyster, poured a spoonful of ketchup on his mouth and dropped the oyster into the yawning maw. At the same instant they cried "Rats." The sleeper came to, gulping down the oyster, rubbed his hand across the mouth, saw a red smear and in white-faced terror moaned: "And the damn thing bit me going down."

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. MUNDY

If you think your afflictions are unbearable you ought to carry around the other fellow's load for a while.

You long to tell some one who will feel sorry and listen attentively while you tell your troubles.

Do you show that sort of sympathetic attention when others come to you with tales of woe which are breaking their hearts and spirits?

Your mind is so taken up with your own suffering there is no room for the contemplation of another's unhappy experience.

Telling of your troubles has made insignificant ones assume enormous proportions—each time you tell it a little worse.

Instead why not put up a brighter front, add to the pleasure of those near you and increase your popularity as well as your prospects of better times.
